A Novel very near to Nature:
THE SMALL FIELDS OF CARRIG
by EDWARD MacLYSAGHT
translated from the original Irish by E. O'Clery. 7s. 6d. net

Here is a novel of sincere realism unmarred by the unpleasant crudeness so often associated with the work of modern realistic writers. The Author is intimately acquainted with the people of the Irish countryside and has first-hand knowledge of their daily work on the farm. The structure and the ending are alike original.

DUBLIN PORT AND DOCKS BOARD.

LETTER REGARDING CURLEY'S HOLE.

At a meeting of the Dublin Port and Docks Board yesterday, the following letter from Mr. J. J. Byrne, T.D., was read:—

"Further to mine re the taking of preventative measures to avoid further loss of life through drowning fatalities at Curley's Hole, North Bull, Dublin, I have to inform you that the Minister of Marine, whom I have approached on this matter, has written me on the 9th inst. suggesting that your Board should co-operate with the City Commissioners and voluntarily take the necessary steps to deal with this problem. I have written to the City Commissioners. I will esteem it a favour if you will request your Board to communicate with them, in order that the suggestion of the Ministry of Industry and Commerce may be duly attended to."

"NO POWER IN THE MATTER."

Senator Moran—We have no power in the matter.

Mr. McCullagh—This place is within the jurisdicton of the County Council. It is outside the boundaries of the Port Board and of the Corporation. I think Mr. Byrne should be notified that he has written to the wrong authority.

Mr. P. J. Lawrence (Chairman)—He has been already notified, but there is no objection to having a word with the Commissioners.

The Secretary was instructed to communicate with the Town Clerk in connection with the matter, with a view to ascertaining what could be done.

A slight increase in register tonnage which entered the port of Dublin for nine months ending 30th September was reported.

Tyne coal and coke shipments for the nine months' total 14,651,690 tons, or 2,839,144 tons more than in the like period last year, and are now nearly equal to pre-war shipments. Fifty vessels, totalling 189,179 gross tons, have been launched on the Tyne in 1929, or ten fewer vessels and 65,982 tons less than in the corresponding period last year.

THE LIBERATOR OF VENEZUELA.

IN the Europe of to-day the name of Simon Bolivar is still remembered as that of the George Washington of South America, and the details of his career are not quite forgotten. But who knows anything about José Antonio Páez? Nevertheless, a hundred years ago, Europe joined with the two Americans in doing him honour, and, indeed, if he did not reach the giant stature of Bolivar, his achievements in war and in statesmanship fell not far short of what the latter's fame is based upon.

Mr. Cunninghame Graham, therefore, does well to recall the exploits of this guerilla fighter, who became in fact, as well as in name, the real Liberator of Venezuela. Here is one of the thrilling stories of national revolt told with sympathy, skill and the vivacity for which Mr. Graham is noted. Mr. Graham is, of course, at home in anything that concerns South America, and every page of this book shows that in Páez he has a subject after his own heart. His love of the romantic and the picturesque, his temperament and his ancestry, combine to make him the man for this job, and, at the end of this work, it is not surprising to find that his maternal grandfather, the Scottish laird who became Admiral the Honourable Charles Elphinstone Fleeming, married Doña Catalina Paulina Jiminez y Alesandro, and sat as a Liberal in the Reform Parliament, took to Páez from the first, and their common interest in horses bound them to each other, as it also evidently binds Mr. Graham to both of them.

Páez was born in the Llanos, got no more than a hedge-school education, learnt horsemanship and life amongst the Llaneros, the most primitive of plainsmen—"wild horsemen, undisciplined, half-naked, ill-fed" — served in the beginning under a Spanish Royalist general, joined the patriot army against Spain, and rose quickly to the highest rank. Incidents in his campaigns, as Mr. Graham says, read like a page from Malory, Froissart or Montstrelet. "Men fight hand to hand, defy one another before their followers, prisoners are butchered in cold blood, hair-breadth escapes from death abound in every page. . . . Countries several times as large as France or Spain, or as the two joined together, depended on the issue of a battle between three or four thousand infantry and a horde of wild Llanero cavalry. Thus General Arismandi reconquered the great island of Margarita with a force that, at the beginning, only counted fifty men, who had as their sole armament three muskets and a hundred and twenty cartridges. . . . The Italian condottieri and the partisans during the Thirty Years' War changed sides with great impartiality, but it was usually from hope of gain. It was reserved to Páez and his kind to change their regiments because they thought their horses would be put out of countenance by being called upon to associate with lean, spavined hacks. The reason seems quite as good and as cogent as any gentleman is obliged to offer his superior officer. It certainly made warfare more amusing, if no whit less bloodthirsty." As Mr. Graham remarks, there was something of the Homeric about these contests. At times the reader comes across incidents and actions strikingly reminiscent of the battles and single combats of Gaelic epic; at others, of things familiar to students of more recent and less remote uprisings and revolutions.

Páez was a born general, a horseman before the Lord if ever there was one, and one of the greatest of the world's guerilla leaders, as this volume abundantly demonstrates. He was the first American to advocate the freedom of the negroes, was twice President of the Venezuelan Republic, was cast out with ignominy after his second term, although it was his championship of the national demands,even against Bolivar himself, that prevented a disastrous war with Columbia, and saved his country from absorption in the more powerful state, and died in exile full of years and destitute of the world'sgoods.

An excellent map helps the reader to follow Mr. Graham's narrative of the War of Independence over the vast territories that once were the Spain beyond the seas.

THE LIFE STORY OF THE PRIME MINISTER.

THE school of biographers of which Samuel Smiles was such a distinguished representative flourishes to-day only in the United States. "Getting-on," from engine foot-plate to Lord Privy Seal, or from log cabin to White House, is so much the accepted theme of American biographers that the very accents of "Self-Help" may be heard in their every word.

What a sermon Smiles could have given upon this life-story of James Ramsay Macdonald! In his young days young Macdonald walked the streets of London on the verge of starvation; to-day he is Prime Minister of Britain, and, when he returns from America, he is to receive the Freedom of the city in which he nearly starved forty-five years ago. Only ten years ago London was capable of stoning him publicly, and fifteen years ago he was probably the most generally derided man in the country. "Only Mr. Macdonald could reveal," says Mr. Tiltman, "the true story of what it cost him to speak the truth as he saw it during the years of cataclysm. The years of exile aged him. His hair whitened with the strain, but his spirit did not break. . . . I believe that when the historian of the future sits down to assess his career and to tell his story, in it will be found a tribute to the dauntless courage revealed during those dark lean years of adversity, without which he could not have reached the daylight on the other side."

It is possible that Mr. Hessell Tiltman exaggerates a little when he writes of Mr. Macdonald's as "perhaps the most remarkable career of our generation," but that it is a remarkable career will not be disputed. "It is a picture," says the biographer, "of a boy who nearly became a farm labourer, but who built up a new political party instead; of a boy who nearly starved in the city through which he was later to ride as First Minister of the Crown; of a boy who educated himself to be an 'intellectual' with a mind and culture that all men admire; of a boy who became the most powerful tribune of the working people in our history." He was born in October, 1866, in the Moray fishing village of Lossiemouth, in conditions of dire poverty. Only his indomitable courage, and the help of that wife whose biography he himself wrote, could have brought him to the highest pinnacle of British and world political life.

His earlier adult years were all spent in work which aimed at social reform, and so ardent was he that he actually resigned his post as private secretary to another social reformer at Bristol because his employer's ideals did not coincide with his own. For four years he was private secretary to the late Thomas Lough, and in that capacity probably had much to do with the preparation of Lough's once famous book, "England's Wealth; Ireland's Poverty." If that be so—and the dates suggest that it is—James Ramsay Macdonald began to have an intimate contact with Irish affairs at the age of 22, and that contact he never relaxed.

A CONFERENCE OF UNIVERSITIES.

THE report of the Annual Conference of the Universities of Great Britain and Ireland, published by the Universities Bureau of the British Empire, Russell square, London, is an interesting and instructive document. Two subjects were discussed—"The general standard of attainment required for admission to a University course, and, in relation thereto, the curricula of the last two years of school prior to entrance to the University"; and "The Study of Biology in the Universities."

During the discussion on these topics some hard things were said about the outlook of those who direct secondary schools. An Oxford zoologist pointed out that, of the twenty-two students now at that University reading for an Honours Degree in Zoology and Comparative Anatomy, only one could translate German, and not one half-dozen could be trusted to get the right sense out of a French scientific paper. It was pointed out that it is not the business of the University to give elementary instruction of that kind. As a corollary, one may mention that it is not the business of British Universities to instruct Indians and various overseas candidates for our doctorates in the writing of scientific theses in correct English. It is our business only to give these men a problem, and to instruct them in the manner in which it should be attacked. The attempts which I have seen made in at least two universities to provide facilities for the learning of scientific German appear to have met with failure. The students seem to lack enthusiasm. In some British Universities biological questions are asked in the form of a short German or French sentence taken from a text-book in one of these languages; but, if the student has not learned German or French at school, this seems an unfair means of introducing these languages to the notice of science students.

* * * * *

A Magdalen College, Oxford, tutor mentioned how an old friend of his examined for history scholarships. There were four papers in history, an English essay, and a general paper. He started examining every year by tearing up the four history papers. The scholarships were awarded on the English essay and the general paper.

In the same sense, a London zoologist said: "It seems to me that if, after matriculation, these boys and girls spent their last two years of school in learning to write English, learning to read German and French, learning to use simple tools, learning to draw, and a certain amount of accuracy in statement, it would be better for them than taking special classes for the higher school certificate."

The scholarships and exhibitions of Oxford and Cambridge are nearly all entrance prizes. That is to say, boys are spoon-fed in one or more subjects, and are sent to these universities where, as the Magdalen College, Oxford, tutor puts it, "the unfortunate people in Oxford find themselves examining the history and classical masters in the secondary schools"; and that is what it all amounts to in the end.

* * * * *

In Trinity College, Dublin, wisely, the scholarships are "University" Scholarships, and not "School" Scholarships, as at Oxford and Cambridge, because these prizes are given in the university for university work, and not for school cramming. Long may it be so!

In the Irish Free State the problem of languages for students is much complicated by compulsory Irish, to which the unfortunate Irish student must attend, over and above any question of German, French, Latin or Greek.

TWO FRENCH NOVELS.

IT is probably much too late to attempt to recommend André Maurois to the attention of readers, but it is never too late to praise his work. All who have read "The Silence of Colonel Bramble" or "Ariel" will be waiting and watching for every new book of his to come from the publishers. Here, in "Whatever Gods May Be," is a book that will delight and charm all his admirers, and will certainly add many new admirers to the number. As novels go to-day it is short, but thousands of the long and tedious effusions that issue from the printing-press might be sacrificed for this one gem, which is certain to be recognised as one of the outstanding books of the year. It is in essence a story of love and jealousy, in which one Philippe Marcenat loves two women, but that bare statement conveys nothing of the characterisation of these three sufferers, so beautifully outlined against a background of contemporary French social life. Because of the strength of its characterisation, the sympathetic humanity of the author, and the delicate charm of its style "Whatever Gods May Be," demands to be read by everyone who is anxious to know the best that is being published in present-day fiction.

"Molinoff" is a much slighter thing: very short, very light, vivacious and witty, as only a French writer can be at his best. There is social satire, and perhaps some malicious caricature, in the book which tells the adventures of Count Ivan Molinoff when compelled by poverty to take a situation as cook in a château on the Loire, where old nobility and new millionaires rub shoulders and clink cocktail-glasses to the music of negro bands. Satire at it's lightest and most devastating will make readers of "Molinoff" laugh.

THE LEGION BOOK.

WHAT a remarkable galaxy of talent and genius is represented in "The Legion Book"! It opens with an essay by Mr. John Galsworthy. A poem by Mr. Rudyard Kipling is in his finest vein. Mr. Winston Churchill writes on Earl Haig, and next to him comes Mr. Edgar Wallace, writing on "Thomas Atkins." Dr. Robert Bridges contributes a poem, "The Widow," which was written in 1921, and Miss Margaret Kennedy has a short story.

Other names among those of contributors are David Garnett, Sir Henry Newbolt, Mr. J. C. Squire, Mr. P. G. Wodehouse, Mr. John Drinkwater, Mr. Edmund Blunden, Mr. G. K. Chesterton, Mr. Hilaire Belloc, Miss Shiela Kaye-Smith, "Sapper," Mr. Walter de la Mare.

Story-tellers, essayists and poets are supported by artists of equal mark. James McBey's water-colour, "First Sight of Jerusalem," is the gem of the book, and there are studies for "Gassed" by the late John Sargent. Strube's drawing, "The Aftermath," is a delicious comedy in line.

The volume is produced in stately form, with a modest cover; and Captain H. Cotton Minchin, the editor, must share his meed of praise with the publishers, Messrs. Cassell. All proceeds of the sale—the price is 21s.—go to the British Legion.

EDITIONS-DE-LUXE.—A sumptuous edition of Defoe's "Moll Flanders" has been published by Messrs. John Lane (25s. net). It is illustrated and decorated by Mr. John Austen in his most delicate line-work, and Mr. W. H. Davies. Uniform with this handsome voluume is an edition of Fielding's "Joseph Andrews" by the same publishers and at the same price. The illustrations are by Norman Tealby, and they have a grotesque rotundity of figure that suits the tale. Mr. J. B. Priestly writes the introduction.

RECENT FICTION.

DAPHNE LOVELL is the child of divorced parents. Her mother, a successful actress, finding David Lovell totally unable to make the best of his gifts, throws in her lot with Havelock, who is both artist and man of business. Lovell, although cultured and charming, is deplorably weak; he leaves Daphne in her mother's charge till she is twelve, and then takes her from a fashionable boarding school, where she is in a fair way to become an objectionable little snob, to his home in a South Down village. Under her father's influence she develops a love of open-air and nature study, and becomes keenly interested in the ancient history of Sussex. Father and daughter are the best of comrades, but when Daphne is sixteen and Lovell forty-five he marries a girl twenty years his junior, who is jealous of their comradeship, and Lovell being too weak to take his daughter's part, the home life becomes very unhappy. Daphne and a vicar's son fall in love, but his ardour cools when he hears of her divorced mother, and the girl takes his defection greatly to heart. The charming and successful playwright, Raymond Oscroft, who has befriended Daphne from her childhood, employs her as his secretary, but the reader cannot fail to be disappointed at his behaviour in the close of the story. There is a great deal of delightfully open-air action in the book, and the charms of the downland are well depicted.

"First Quarter." By S. P. B. Mais. Cassell. 7/6 net.

THE scene of this story is in Rhodesia. Nick Lovell, an enterprising young farmer, falls in love with and marries Greta Johnson, a beautiful but hard and selfish girl who hates farm life, and only marries Nick because there is a possibility that he may inherit a baronetcy. His married life is full of troubles and difficulties, and he receives neither help nor sympathy from his wife. Nick's great friends, Bob Vernon and his widowed sister, Janet Ransome, live at a neighbouring farm. Janet is an optimistic, resourceful young woman, the right wife for Nick, if he had only realised it in time. After much tribulation she saves him from disaster, and life takes a happy aspect for both. There are vivid descriptions of the country and of life on the farms and the Kaffir servants. The colour problem is brought strikingly before us; the author depicts the misery of the illegitimate children of native mothers and white fathers, and draws attention to the fact that, although it is a penal offence for a black man to associate with a white woman, there is no penalty for the white man when the case is reversed. The story is interesting and well written.

"Uphill Trek." By Sheila Macdonald. Cassell. 7/6 net.

THIS exceedingly well written, but most melancholy, story deals with the experiences of Joyce (Joy) Raven, a pretty and unsophisticated girl of seventeen, who, tiring of the restrictions of her narrow lower middle class home in a provincial town, joins Mrs. Rice-Pilkington's theatrical touring company. Joy was never quick at her lessons, and was considered stupid at school; but she is pretty and pleasing, and has her head filled with dreams of love and success. She, unfortunately, attracts the attentions of Maurice (the leading man), with whom Mrs. Rice-Pilkington is madly infatuated, and in consequence of this, in conjunction with her failure in a new part at rehearsal, is dismissed and told to go home. Dreading the idea of the drab home life, she goes to London, where she fails in getting an engagement, but keeps writing to her mother of her rosy prospects. She returns home to find her mother estranged by her deception, and disliking a daughter who, she fears, has not kept herself altogether respectable. Joy cannot bear her mother's nagging, and after another unsuccessful venture we leave her in a café with that abominable creature "Maurice," who, being altogether "down and out," is evidently scheming to live on the wages of her shame.

"Joy is my Name." By Sarah Salt. Gollancz. 7/6 net.

THE scene of this novel is the small American city of "Midland," but the writing is remarkably free from American phraseology. Valeria Grove and Owen Mallory have both been jilted for wealthier partners, and, with the idea of disappointing the singularly disagreeable and scandal-loving society folk of Midland, they decide to marry one another, and play the part of most ardent and infatuated lovers. Valeria is "beautiful, distinguished and dignified," but her behaviour to her husband is only comparable to that of a sulky and objectionable child. After many wearisome misunderstandings and bickerings between husband and wife, the story comes to a happy ending. With a few exceptions, the characters are as aimless and spiteful a lot as it is possible to imagine.

"Second Choice." By Elizabeth Alexander. Philip Allan. 7/6 net.

Admirers of Major Gardiner's previous novel, "At the House of Dree," will not doubt his ability to tell an exciting story. His hero, a convicted thief whose past is ever in front of him, is projected into an amazing series of adventures in South Africa, where he has been sent for the benefit of his social health. The story takes so many unexpected turns that even the author himself might cry with one of his characters, "Take my word for the facts." The paradoxical title is abundantly justified, and seekers after an original story in the unusual setting of a South African up-country town should certainly put the name on their library lists.

RUNAWAY HORSE INCIDENT.

A deal of excitement was caused when a horse yoked to a furniture cart took fright in Thomas street, Dublin, yesterday morning and galloped into Bridgefoot street, where a number of children were playing. Hearing the screams of women and children, Mr. S. H. Abbot, a Corporation inspector, dashed to the spot and, at great personal risk, caught the reins of the runaway. He was dragged for some distance before he could stop the animal.

DUBLIN CHILD'S DEATH.

A verdict that death was due to shock and hemorrhage following injuries was returned at an inquest held in the Adelaide Hospital, Dublin, yesterday, on Kathleen Lawlor, aged one year and nine months, of 16 Engine alley, off Meath street, who was knocked down by a horse-drawn lorry in Meath street on Tuesday. Informations had been refused against the driver of the van in the Dublin District Court.

Among the prize-winners at the Blackpool musical festival was a blind girl, Eleanore Skidmore, of Burnley, who was first in the competition for Elizabethan vocal music.

that is how our sleep should be,"

A cupful of this delightful food-drink banishes wakefulness . . . brings calm, natural rest

EIGHT hours' rest a night—sound, peaceful, refreshing . . almost every one of us, doctors say, needs this in order to keep truly fit!

Yet frequently, through one cause or another, we fail to get the rest we need. We go to bed overtired, worried, or irritable; or lack of sufficient fresh air and proper exercise, or the wrong food, set up small physical disturbances that make us wakeful and restless all night, tired and unrefreshed next day.

There is a simple, natural way to induce restful sleep — a way that doctors the world over recommend — by drinking a cupful of Horlick's, last thing every night!

PEACEFUL DROWSINESS

As you sip Horlick's, the generous warmth of the Malted Milk penetrates your whole system. The rich nutriment it contains sets in action a gentle, soothing digestive process that leads gradually to peaceful drowsiness, and so to deep, calm slumber.

And while you sleep, Horlick's carries on the task of storing your body with energy for the coming day. For Horlick's contains the food-elements the body most needs in the form in which they can most readily be digested. Full-cream milk, selected wheat, fine malted barley — these are the ingredients from which Horlick's is made.

Start drinking Horlick's tonight! After a day or two, inevitably you will find you sleep better, and rise feeling fitter and fresher. Chemists and grocers have Horlick's — the original plain kind, and the delicious new Chocolate Flavoured Malted Milk — in sealed glass bottles in four sizes. A FRIEND'S VISIT.

THOUGHTS OF A PRISONER.

(By D. M. LARGE.)

THE lions were a great disappointment to him—one could see that in the droop of his shoulders as he turned away from the cages. After all, a man who has yoked a young horse for the first time to a harrow, or has milked an angry, kicking cow, is quite likely to find a drowsy, yawning lion something of a disappointment.

One trembled to think what sort of monster he had expected the elephant to be; for its comparative smallness seemed to be a revelation to him, and he asked three different people if it really was an elephant. When they all agreed, he blinked a little and turned away. The zebra interested him faintly. "The very same as if you led sthreaks upon a jinnet," he said, "only you'd be hard set to get them so exact the whole way along." The monkeys gave him real pleasure by their fancied resemblance to people he had met from time to time; but, on the whole, he was disappointed, and the brown hat, that was so many sizes too big, sank lower and lower on his weather-beaten neck.

By this time onlookers were filled with a deep desire to show him something that would come up to his expectations; for the trip to the city was the fulfilment of an old wish. He had stood at the mouth of a certain bohereen at an unearthly hour that morning, to be picked up and borne away by the 'bus that has linked Cloonagh with the metropolis which once was as remote as the North Pole.

A SMALL CAGE.

He was frankly bored by the bears, and folk who were interested in him pinned their faith to the sea lion, with its cleaving rush through the clouded water, and the plaintive, inarticulate cries to those who stood near-by. Having directed him towards the pond, they watched him go, but suddenly he halted beside a small isolated cage, and it was easy to see that, there at last, he had found something that really interested him. When onlookers strolled that way some time later he still stood there, and the grunting cries of the sea lion were unheeded.

It seemed a small cage for a creature that will run from Ballinderry to Dunboe in less than forty minutes, across the brown ridges left by the plough, or through the huddled groups of sheep. "The Common Fox" it was called, and underneath the name was the warning that keeps the staring crowds from the beasts that look the part so much better than that red-brown creature, with the bushy tail. "Dangerous" it said, and one could scarcely believe that it was true. The man who had come so far was talking to the little red fox, and there was a queer glint in the crafty eyes that watched him without flinching, as he spoke of those things that every Irish fox must know—the invasion of a hillside covert by eager purposeful hounds, and the sudden crash of music when the small shape had flitted across the first field, and was gone on his great race with death.

"I never got such a good look at his Nabs before," the Cloonagh man said over his shoulder, "as often as he went by me on the headland, an' I bawlin' a caution to the Masther that he was off, an' mebbe to have the face ett off of me for me reward; but God knows I never thought to see a fox, above all, sittin' there throwin' a lonesome shadda before him, like a tiger cat at a fire."

THE MAN WHO UNDERSTOOD.

A yellow leaf floated down and rested for a moment on the speaker's shoulder. "Only a couple of weeks more," he said, "an' they'll be at it agen, an' there won't be a man or a chap about Cloonagh but'll pelt down his spade or his fork an' off wid him to the hill, an' every ould stageen of a horse buck-leppin' upon the short grass; an' there that fella must sit. I declare to man, 'twould sting your heart, so it would." The wary eyes shifted a little and seemed to look further than one could see—as far as a gorse-crowned hill where a red coat gleamed among the low bushes, where the sounds that drifted out upon the soft air made a ploughman pause far below, with one half of his brown line drawn on the yellow-green field, as he watched the distant figures against the pearly sky.

The onlookers grew thoughtful. "What about the stopped earths?" they were thinking—the sanctuary towards which a jaded, draggled fox had set his face. What about those humans who might have helped him in his gallant fight, yet whose only desire was to summon enemies he had foiled for a little and to set them on his track once more? Was it not better to be safe even in a cage, than to run for one's life against such tremendous odds? Yet the untamed eyes flickered over them for an instant, and seemed to hold disdain; then they stared again at the man who understood.

"For the shake of a hat I'd let you out this minute," the man said, "but then I'd be the worst in the world for doin' it; for they wouldn't repose anny belief in what I'd say. But I'll take me oath you'd be the immaculate divil for runnin' if so be you could be allegatin' about Ballinderry Hill."

The little red fox turned suddenly and went into the box-like shelter in which he was hidden from prying eyes, and the Cloonagh man walked slowly down the leaf-strewn path.

DONATION TO THE NATIONAL MUSEUM.

DUG-OUT CANOE FOUND AT LOCH RINN.

We have been informed by Dr. A. Mahr, Keeper of Irish Antiquities, National Museum, Dublin, that a dug-out canoe has been presented to the Museum by Mr. H. J. B. Clements, Killadoon, Celbridge, County Kildare. It was found on the shore of Lough Rinn, in Leitrim. Mr. R. H. R. Stewart, Dublin, and Sergeant W. Fitzgerald, of the Sligo and Leitrim Civic Guards, took much trouble to preserve it for the Museum, and Mr. H. J. B. Clements enhanced the value of his gift by defraying the expenses of removing the canoe to the Museum.

St. Luke's Little Summer.

To-day is the festival of St. Luke. The apostle-physician also gives his name to the mild spell of weather which usually occurs at this time of the year—St. Luke's Little Summer. The slowly dying summer, fatally injured by autumn, appears to regain strength and survive a little longer, as though unwilling to give us up to the harsh treatment of winter. Nor has she failed us this year. Nature seems to have been at a stand-still for the last few days, as though, by taking advantage of the sunny weather, she is trying to cheat autumn of her due. One is reminded how, in March, when the first crop of fresh, green leaves appears on the trees, winter, making a dying effort, succeeds in bringing them withered to the ground.

Autumn Tints.

We are grateful for this, as it were, extension of summer. Besides "shortening the winter," it allows nature to slow up in her process of transforming the leaves from green to brown, thus giving us opportunity to admire the variety of tints with which she has bedecked herself. The countryside is resplendent in colours, ranging from all the shades of green, through yellows of golden and coppery hues, to deep shades of purple. The latter beautiful tints are produced by the reflection of the deep blue autumn sky in the shiny, fading leaves of trees like the hawthorn. The tree whose leaves first commence to turn brown is the horse-chestnut; and lime, beech, elm, poplar and sycamore quickly follow suit. The ash lingers behind, as though loth to part with a verdure that will soon be monopolised by evergreens and coniferous trees.

The Genius of Dublin.

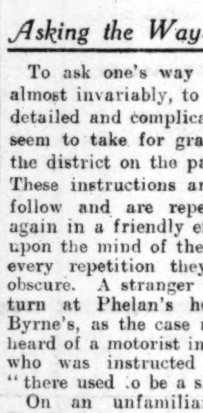
Mr. Michael Scott, the Abbey actor, who is playing the part of Carl Svensen, a Swedish-American, in "Ever the Twain," Mr. Lennox Robinson's new play, told me yesterday of an amusing experience which he had during the performance on Wednesday night. In the course of the play Svensen is discussing the futility of the Great War with an Englishman. "What was the use of it all?" he asks. "What did you get out of it? You had a million dead, and you owe us three billion dollars." The play was going with a great swing on Wednesday night, and Mr. Scott was enjoying himself immensely. His style was rather cramped, however, when, as he declared to the Englishman, "you owe us three billion dollars," a voice from the gallery shouted: "Yes; and we're paying it, too!" Could any other city but Dublin have produced such a comment? Probably the interruptor in his day was a staunch Sinn Feiner.

Asking the Way.

To ask one's way in rural Ireland is, almost invariably, to be overwhelmed with detailed and complicated instructions that seem to take for granted a knowledge of the district on the part of the questioner. These instructions are not at all easy to follow and are repeated over and over again in a friendly effort to impress them upon the mind of the hearer, though with every repetition they may become more obscure. A stranger will often be told to turn at Phelan's house, or Doyle's or Byrne's, as the case may be, and one has heard of a motorist in the West of Ireland who was instructed to turn off where "there used to be a signpost."

On an unfamiliar road in County Dublin I inquired of a man the best way to reach a certain historical ruin, and was told in all good faith to "go on sthraight till you come to the house where Mrs. Hennessey used to live; then wheel to your right."

New Northern Law Courts.



MR. G. LANSBURY.

Mr. George Lansbury, the First Commissioner of Works in the British Labour Government, has definitely announced his intention to be present at the foundation-stone laying ceremony in connection with the new Northern Law Courts in Chichester street, Belfast, to-morrow, the total cost of which is estimated at £170,000.

Mr. Lansbury, who is now in his 71st year, has long been one of the most-discussed men in British public and political life. Most of his political activities have been bound up with the Poplar district of London, where he has been a borough councillor for 26 years and a poor law guardian for 38 years. He was Mayor of Poplar in 1919-20, and has been M.P. for the Bow and Bromley Division since 1922.

It is not generally remembered that Mr. Lansbury's first political sympathies were with the Radicals, but he later became an ardent Socialist worker, and had a big part in the foundation of the Daily Herald. He was a member of the Royal Commission on the Poor Law, signing the minority report, and he established the first poor law labour colony in London.

Gaming Machines.

While passing through a Dublin street the other day I was greatly surprised to see a number of little boys and girls in a huckster's shop, gathered around a gaming machine. It is bad enough for the older people to have the temptation of a bookmaker's office at every corner in our city; but when it comes to little children acquiring the habits of their parents it is time the police took action.

A School on Wheels.

A school teacher, who has just returned from a visit to Canada, tells me of an interesting and successful educational experiment which has been tried there. This is the "school on wheels," a trainful of teachers, who penetrate to the most remote parts of Eastern Canada, bringing cheer and enlightenment to the families of isolated farmers and trappers. Three years ago some of the railway companies presented free coaches, the Department of Education supplied equipment, and the train started off on its 150-mile beat, halting from three to six days at certain sidings, while the children assembled from miles around to attend school. Then home-work was set in anticipation of the next visit, six or eight months later. Night schools are held for the parents, who vie with the children in their enthusiasm over this new interest which has entered their lives, bringing them into contact with the outside world. As examples of their keenness, my friend mentioned the case of two young boys who came forty miles by themselves, pitched their tent near the school, and lived there the whole winter, fending for themselves. Another boy packed a hamper with a week's supply of food, and paddled downstream for thirty-two miles to attend the travelling school.

Australia's New Rulers.

MR. J. SCULLIN.

When the new Labour Government is installed in office in the Australian Commonwealth within the next few days, several of the ministries will be occupied by men of Irish birth or descent. The outstanding figure among them is, of course, the new Prime Minister, Mr. J. H. Scullin, one of the many workers of Irish origin, who have climbed high in political life in the British Dominions overseas. The Scullins are fairly plentiful in Northern Ireland, and it was from Ulster that the Premier's parents emigrated over half a century ago. His father was one of the adventurous spirits who were drawn to Ballarat at the time of the famous gold rush in Victoria in 1851. Mr. Scullin was born in Ballarat twenty-five years later, and, after a short period in an elementary school, became a trade union leader, and attracted much attention by his successful organisation of the Labour Party in Victoria. He formally adopted a political career in 1903, but unsuccessfully opposed the late Mr. Alfred Deakin, then Prime Minister, and one of the big men at the Colonial Conference in 1907. For a time he edited a moderate Labour daily, the Ballarat Echo, and interested himself in educational schemes and the development of the Catholic Young Men's Society in Melbourne. In 1910 he won his first seat in the Federal Parliament, but lost it again three years later, and did not re-enter the House of Representatives until 1922. Since then he has represented the Yarra division of Melbourne, and holds it so securely that he is always returned unopposed. Two years ago he became Deputy Leader of his Party, and last year he succeeded Mr. Charlton as Federal Leader.

Mr. Scullin has shown exceptional gifts in Parliament, is regarded as one of the ablest debaters in Australia, and has a big reputation as a financial expert.

Drogheda Harbour.

One reads of the many efforts being made by the Harbour Boards in Ireland to attract trade to their ports. This rivalry is a healthy sign, and many people hope that it will continue to grow in strength; for it will mean the distribution of trade. The large ports must hold the balance of the imports and exports, but there is no reason why small ports should not cater for their districts. Much has been heard of Galway, Cork and Limerick, and now Fenit in Co. Kerry; but little is known of the improvements carried out at the Drogheda port, which is, without doubt, one of the oldest in Ireland. A year ago the Harbour Board erected a coal station on the banks of the river, thus facilitating the discharge of coal, and now they have laid down a splendid concrete road right along the quays, from the Boyne Viaduct to St. Mary's Bridge. They have had some minor works completed, and it is to be hoped that their efforts will meet with due success, thus bringing Drogheda Port near to the point of prosperity which it once knew.

The Walking-stick.

Personally, I cannot go about without a walking-stick. The carrying of one has so grown upon me that I should feel incomplete if I left it behind me. I had not taken any further interest in the habit than that until I overheard the following from a pair of boys in the street: "Is it the young one you're after saying?" "It is." "Ayah, that's a high up one, that is. Sure, he's a stick in his fist." So, the walking-stick has a social value. In this country, indeed, the habit of carrying a stick is almost confined to old men who have achieved the "tripodic" stage of life; or to cattle-jobbers, in which case the "ould ash plant" is rather a switch than a walking cane. The carrying of the stick as an emblem derives from across Channel, where it is a relic of the old-time rapier of the "gentleman," and in that way, the apparent social kudos of affecting it arises. I do not know that the cane has much value as a weapon, unless against the attack of a dog, when a blow on the legs will save your skin. Against man, to be of any use, it requires a skilful handling, which few trouble to acquire; and the inept can be readily disarmed. The stick can be decorative; but there is a truculent solidity about the blackthorn which is hard to beat.

Curious Irish Industry.

A correspondent writes:—Recently when staying at Listowel I took the 'bus to the neighbouring seaside resort, Ballybunion, and there found a curious industry. As I walked along the beautiful shore the smell of boiling fish was wafted to my nostrils, and on coming closer I found an old fisherman mixing in an ugly bucket a queer substance, and I at once thought of the witches in that scene in "Macbeth." In conversation with him I learnt that a few fishermen make some money through boiling the blubber of seals caught in the well-known caves of Ballybunion. At certain stages of the tide the seals swim in there and are easily captured by the fishermen, who take them by setting nets at the mouth of the caves, as many trappers catch rabbits. Back on the seashore a huge fire is lighted and the valuable parts of the seal are boiled. The oil thus obtained is bottled and sold for as much as 7s. 6d. It is claimed that this fluid is a sure cure for rheumatism and all kindred ailments. Now I know why all the Dublin bookmakers who attend Listowel races are so jolly.

The Deft Conductor.

I have been travelling a deal by motor-'bus these days, and I have remarked on the frequency with which the coin tendered as fare or in change has fallen to the floor, and how often one had really to attend if one wished to grasp the ticket with any comfort. First I thought that this was due to the motion of the vehicle, but, after watching deliberately the way in which the tram conductors perform this side of their duties, I came to the conclusion that it is a question purely of habit and skill. Seldom, indeed, does the coin slip when the tramway man is dealing with it, and with what precision he deposits the ticket right into the nest of your hand, so that you automatically close upon it in the most convenient manner possible. The omnibus conductor will, doubtless, become equally deft in time; in the meanwhile, there is a datum, from which the budding Sherlock Holmes may infer whether his conductor is tyro or veteran. The tram conductor has another direction in which he exhibits a similar deftness. I have often admired the skill with which he aids on or off the moving tram the rash persons who attempt that feat without proper knowledge of the technique. To that skill not a few people owe the preservation of, if not their limbs, at any rate, their clothes.

The Pigeon House.

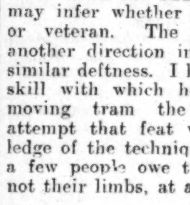
An English friend, visiting Dublin, was much disappointed to find that the Pigeon House was an electric light station of prosaic appearance, instead of the picturesque abode of all sorts of pigeons.

She confessed that she had always imagined it to be a huge dove cote, with flocks of iridescent birds wheeling about it, and the first sight of the present building at the end of the south wall was something of a shock.

During the eighteenth century a wooden house stood upon piles in the water, close to where the electric light station now stands, and it was known as Pidgeon's House, because a watchman of that name lived there. He had a boat, in which he conveyed people from the shore to his retreat, where he supplied refreshments that were much sought after.

When the South Wall was built, a stone house superseded the wooden one, and was called the Block House, but soon the old name triumphed in the present form, and even the big building that stands there now has always been known as the Pigeon House.

M. Pachmann's Operation.



M. PACHMANN.

Irish lovers of music will learn with regret of the illness which has compelled M. Vladimir Pachmann, the famous pianist, to relinquish temporarily his concert work in order to undergo an operation for an internal ailment which has been troubling him for some time; and there will be a general hope for his early recovery.

Pachmann is universally regarded as the finest living interpreter of the works of Chopin. Many years ago he was able to get possession of one of Chopin's coats, and he usually wears this treasured prize when appearing on the concert platform.

Pachmann was born at Odessa over eighty years ago, and received his musical education at Vienna. He continued his studies for many years, and did not commence giving public performances until he was nearly forty years of age.

He is due to visit Ireland next month in connection with the Celebrity Concerts, and there will be much disappointment if his operation prevents him from keeping his engagement.

The Library Pigeons.

Everyone who is in the habit of visiting the National Library in the afternoon must be familiar with the sight of the pigeons who slumber, head under wing, on a narrow ledge high up on the building. The first sign of dusk sends them to their roost, and when robbed of the lovely sheen given to their plumage by the sunshine, they look as though they were carved out of the stone of which the Library is built.

Yesterday afternoon there was an unaccustomed stir among the birds at an hour when usually they are asleep; for the gardeners in the grounds of Leinster House, like so many other gardeners just now, were busy all through the day, removing the geraniums from the beds that surround the statue of Queen Victoria, and the turned-up earth must have been full of lovely things from a pigeon's point of view.

The Free Port Scheme : Interest Aroused in Belfast : Relief of Distress : A Successful Experiment : The Marketing of Irish Eggs.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Thursday.

THE suggestion that a free port should be established in Dublin has naturally created a great deal of interest in Belfast, and developments will be carefully considered by the authorities responsible for the Northern harbour. With the passage of the years the volume of traffic passing through Belfast harbour is ever increasing, and even this week a substantial advance in tonnage has been reported over the corresponding period of the last twelve months. Anything, therefore, that tended to retard progress and growth would be viewed with anxiety. It was stated at the Dublin meeting that the immediate result of the expeditious handling of ships and cargoes, favouring a free port, would be that lower freights would be accepted to and from Dublin than in competing ports like Belfast, Liverpool and Glasgow, and that the Southern merchants would also be in a favoured position regarding the sampling, repacking, blending, sorting and manipulation of goods, without restriction, at an economic cost. This is all very illuminating, and, if anything comes of the proposal, no doubt the Northern Government and the Harbour Commissioners will do all in their power to protect the interests of Belfast.

Perhaps, there may be something in Mr. C. McGloughlin's observation that a free port for Dublin would benefit the foreigner more than it would the trade and agriculture of this country, but that question may be safely left to the experts to determine. In any case such ideas serve to show that the Free State is not asleep to the industrial situation, and that there is vision and enterprise south of the border.

A HELPFUL SCHEME.

Satisfactory reports have been received relative to the working of the scheme which was inaugurated early in the year for the relief of exceptional distress in Belfast, as the result of negotiations between the Ministry of Home Affairs, the Corporation and the Board of Guardians. It will be recalled that the project, which was an entirely new departure from existing methods, was only adopted after a great deal of friction with the Home Office, which insisted on adequate steps being taken to assist the unemployed. Its value has been clearly demonstrated. At the meeting of the Guardians, on Tuesday, it was stated that the total number of men relieved during the past six months was 460, with over 2,000 persons dependent on them, at a cost of £5,249 10s. Against this expenditure useful work in improving the city has been done, and it is interesting to note that 131 of the men so employed had been able to find permanent jobs elsewhere.

The best results have been obtained in restoring self-respect to men who were almost in despair, and it is gratifying to find that they are all anxious to get full-time work to do instead of only partial employment. Long spells of the "dole" are demoralising, but labour given for money received brings encouragement and hope to the downcast. In view of the fact that this experiment has been so successful, perhaps the Government might consider the wisdom of extending it in other directions. Vast sums are paid out every week under the Unemployment Insurance Acts, and it would be better for all concerned if works of national importance could be undertaken with the object of decreasing the number of those who are wandering about looking for something to do in town and country and cannot find it.

THE DREAMLAND OF PARENTS.

Important matters connected with the well-being of the community were discussed at a meeting last night in the city by Dr. Charles S. Thomson, the recently appointed Superintendent Medical Officer of Health for Belfast. Dr. Thomson, who is a native of Scotland, is an eloquent speaker, and although the subject he dealt with is generally considered dry-as-dust, he imbued it with romance and the wonders of the golden age of medicine. In a glance back at the more recent past he said that prior to the passing of the Public Health Act of 1875 the people lived, as it were, in gross darkness. It was an epoch-making event, leading to a widespread knowledge of the importance of personal health, and owing to its operations the expectation of life for every child born in Britain to-day was about twelve years longer than that of its grandfather. If people were to live happy, healthy lives there must be good town-planning. That, said Dr. Thomson, was the way to salvation, and it would lead to health and happiness for the children—the dreamland of their parents.

The urgent need for airy homes with scope for sunlight, together with spacious playing-grounds, was insisted upon, and the dangers of slumdom were dealt with. In his reference to personal health, Dr. Thomson said that the secret of living to an old age lay in moderation in eating, drinking and playing. A simple diet was essential if one wanted to live to ninety years, and the golden rule was to take enough food to maintain the lightest weight consistent with perfect health. Such a diet consisted of wholemeal bread, plain biscuits, plain puddings, vegetables, fruit, some meat, fish, milk, butter and cheese. Let them eat more fruits and salads and less meat, and drink plenty of water between meals. People, said the speaker, should not dig their graves with their teeth, but should remember the couplet—

> "A pint of milk, egg, orange and greens
> Give us our daily vitamines."

FORGOTTEN HEROES.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Ulster Branch of the Soldiers', Sailors' and Airmen's Families' Association in Belfast this week, Colonel Charley, C.B.E., said that distress in Belfast and the neighbourhood was more prevalent than ever before. Men who had served in His Majesty's Forces, he said, had no trade and were classed as labourers; but, unfortunately, there were too many labourers for the jobs available. This Society justifies its name, as its operations extend outside the Six Counties, help having been given in the Counties of Antrim, Armagh, Derry, Donegal, Down, Fermanagh, Louth and Tyrone, to the dependents of ex-Service men in need. It does its work in a quiet, unostentatious way, being, as Colonel Charley observed, a "silent service."

Brigadier-General Wauchope, General Officer Commanding the Northern Ireland District, who presided, paid a tribute to the Association for its work, and Major-General the Rev. Dr. Simms, M.P., said that it would be a disgrace to Belfast if the organisation were not properly supported. It is well known that hundreds of ex-Service men are either in Belfast Workhouse or in receipt of outdoor relief, and to them it must seem rather ironical that the Garden of Remembrance Memorial in honour of those who fell in the Great War is to be unveiled with due ceremonial on Armistice Day next month. The fallen are revered while the living are neglected and forgotten.

IRISH EGGS IN BRITAIN.

The references made at Dundalk this week to the marketing of eggs in Great Britain are of interest to Irish farmers generally. It was stated that Free State eggs had to be branded before being exported to England, and as a result they realised a much smaller price than Northern Ireland eggs, which required no distinctive mark to show their place of origin. Within the past few years the Northern eggs have increased greatly in value in the cross-Channel centres, due to proper grading and an excellent law which imposes severe penalties on anyone who sells stale eggs. They do not require to be stamped, as, of course, the Six Counties are a part of the United Kingdom, and their reputation stands high on their own merit.

It is different with regard to eggs from the Free State, as they are in the category of "foreign" produce, and require to be marked in similar fashion to those from Denmark and other outside countries. The eggs from Southern Ireland are, no doubt, equal to any others for quality, and in due course the Irish stamp will be a guarantee of excellence with cross-Channel consumers, thus ultimately increasing both price and demand. One of the members of the Louth Agricultural Committee said that they were told that they would get enhanced prices when the eggs were stamped and sent over for marketing, whereas the reverse was the case.

ATTRACTING THE GIRLS.

It is understood that still another club for girl voters is being organised in Belfast under the auspices of the Ulster Women's Unionist Council, and everything possible is to be done to attract a large number of members. The meetings are to be brightened with games and music, but the main object is political, and "it is hoped that the club will be the means of bringing into the Unionist ranks hundreds of girls who hitherto have understood little about and, in consequence, cared nothing for, politics." Perhaps, young girls would be happier if left in blissful ignorance of the teachings of professional politicians. Prominent speakers are to address the meetings and show them how to cast a party vote, the pill being sugared with the promise of otherwise pleasant evenings; for the average speech is but a dull affair after many vain repetitions.

This new movement is part of the campaign inaugurated a few weeks ago to counteract the growth of Socialism and Independent Unionism—the latter in particular—throughout the province. The desire for freedom in political thought has become quite formidable during the past couple of years, and it is already suggested that members of the "old gang" should be opposed at the municipal elections next January, the success of Independent Unionist candidates last year being considered most encouraging. Business before politics is making its appeal to the electorate.

CARL ROSA OPERA COMPANY.

"MADAM BUTTERFLY."

Butterfly	Helen Ogilvie
Pinkerton	Roland Dickinson
Sharpless	Frederic Collier
Suzuki	Rispah Goodacre
Kate Pinkerton	Irene Dobbyn
Goro	Robert Mawdsley
Prince Yamadori	Ross Richards

Conductor—Richard Austin.

Miss Helen Ogilvie had appeared earlier in the week, but it was in the colourless part of Senta in "The Flying Dutchman," which gave her little scope. In "Madam Butterfly" last night the case was very different. Successful performance of this opera of Puccini depends in a special degree on the ability of the prima donna to sustain through the three acts the character of Butterfly as well as to sing the heavy music of the part. Miss Ogilvie, indeed, had to carry more than the usual weight of responsibility, for the tenor selected for the part of Pinkerton in this performance had not the vocal equipment to give due support in the heavy work of the first act.

Although Pinkerton's part finishes, all but a few bars, when the curtain comes down on the first of the three acts, it is taken customarily by a company's best lyric tenor on account of its importance in the first act, where the tenor has an ample share of the glory of the climax in the love duet. Mr. Roland Dickinson's powers were not quite of the expected size, and it seemed that the tessitura of Pinkerton's music did not lie well for him. He bore himself valiantly in the part, but it is a heavy one for him.

WELL DONE.

Miss Ogilvie rose splendidly to her big responsibility. Her voice has a peculiar timbre, and runs to a hard kind of vibrato on high notes. In a little while we got used to that, and afterwards enjoyed without distraction the brightness of her vocal tone as well as the power of her acting. With admirable sureness she commended to our sympathies the loyalty and brave spirit, as well as the tender qualities, of the little Japanese child-wife.

She kept her words clear, too. That, indeed, was a good point all round. It was noticeable in Mr. Collier, who gave us another of his splendidly competent pieces of work in the part of the Consul, whom he presented as a rock of common-sense. Mr. Collier's presence on the stage gives one a comfortable feeling that nothing untoward can happen to the work, and his vocalism seems to be adequate for a wide range of parts.

Miss Ogilvie had good support, again, from Miss Rispah Goodacre, whose Suzuki, though so different a part, was as good as her Nicklaus in "Tales of Hoffmann" the previous night. Their voices were well matched, and the lovely "Flower Duet" in the second act was a specially enjoyable incident of the music.

The smaller parts all were well cast; in particular, Mr. Ross Richards made Prince Yamadori a more interesting character than usual.

In every opera so far presented the orchestra has been excellent. In a larger theatre a bigger proportion of strings, no doubt, could be employed with advantage to tone quality; but the orchestra as constituted is the best that has been heard in the Gaiety.

Individual members have displayed noteworthy skill, and the collective work has been clean and impressive. I must praise again the attention given by Mr. Austin to what is taking place on the stage and to the singers' need of assistance from time to time. In other respects as well the conductor was alert and painstaking, and Puccini's brilliant score was made to yield the best possible effect.

OBBLIGATO.

DUBLIN MUNICIPAL FINANCE.

MR. HERNON'S REPORT.

In a report on the Finance and General Purposes Section of the Dublin Corporation, Mr. P. J. Hernon, Dublin City Commissioner, points out that payments made during the quarter ended June 30, 1929, amounted to £543,012 7s. 10d., excluding transfers to other accounts. This sum comprised contractors' accounts, standard charges, salaries and wages.

During the same period 33 applications were made for loans under the Small Dwellings Acquisition Acts, amounting to £18,162. Thirty-four advances for loans, amounting to £18,502, were sanctioned by the Department of Local Government and Public Health. Thirty-five advances—a total of £19,062, were made.

INTOXICATING LIQUOR COMMISSION.

SUGGESTED MODIFICATION OF RESTRICTIONS.

MR. CUSSEN ON THE DECREASE OF DRUNKENNESS.

The Free State Intoxicating Liquor Commission resumed its sitting yesterday morning in the Royal College of Physicians, Kildare street, Dublin. Mr. John J. Horgan, solicitor (Chairman), presided, and the other members present were:—Senator Mrs. Costello, Sir James Craig, T.D., M.D.; the Rev. J. O'Flanagan, P.P.; Mr. J. J. McElligott; Senators J. T. O'Farrell, and R. Wilson, and Mr. S. Murphy, T.D.

Mr. George P. Cussen, Senior Metropolitan District Justice, was the first witness. In regard to "split hours," he said that from his experience, and from inquiries which he had made, he formed the opinion that the provisions of the 1927 Liquor Act in that respect had had most excellent results in Dublin, for which he was in a position to speak, as distinct from the rural districts, with the conditions in which he had no official acquaintance. It had effected a reduction in the consumption of drink, and had increased the earning powers of the community. Prior to the enforcement of that provision, a great deal of time was spent by wage-earners in bars after having received their wages, but now they had to leave when the closing hour arrived.

Answering the Chairman—Mr. Cussen said that he was more concerned with the retention of that clause than with the other restrictions in the 1927 Act. He thought, however, that there should be a modification of Section 13, under which drink at a meal could not be consumed unless it was supplied before 2.30 p.m. That restriction, he thought, was too strict, and ought to be abolished.

OPPRESSIVE ON THE POOR.

The Chairman expressed his agreement with the view of the witness to a certain extent, but he did not agree with him in another way, as it would amount to having one law for the rich and another for the poor. Some of the publichouses, he said, were in the habit of giving meals at a reasonable rate, and he did not think that they could be ruled out if they were to deal with the question as suggested by the witness. He agreed with Mr. Cussen, that the section was a little bit on the absurd side, but they could not recommend special legislation in a matter of this kind, and he wished to know from the witness how he proposed to deal with the situation.

Mr. Cussen said that he did not think that anyone could deny that what the Chairman stated was correct—that the restriction was more oppressive upon the poor than on the rich; but in connection with the closing provision in the afternoon public-houses could get a restaurant certificate if the proprietors could show that they were mainly engaged in the sale of food. That condition, however, would cut out a great many public-houses.

The Chairman—What you say would answer my objection.

The witness explained that he wished to point out that at present to obtain that certificate the applicant should prove that he received more money for food than for drink in connection with the restaurant. He suggested the removal of that clause.

The Chairman said that the Guards did not want the present law altered. He would like to have the witness's view in regard to the exemption order area.

Mr. Cussen said that he had made inquiries in regard to the operation of Section 16, and the granting of exemption orders upon special occasions on Sundays, and he feared that it would be very difficult for the owners of licensed premises and for the Guards to enforce compliance with the bona-fide law where large crowds were collected. He realised that on certain occasions it would be desirable that a justice in a county borough should have power to alter the hours during which drink might be sold in county boroughs like Dublin, say, by substituting 4 to 7 p.m. for 2 to 5 p.m. In that case, however, he thought that the application should not be entertained unless it was presented through the Superintendent of the Civic Guard in the particular district.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

In dealing with the St. Patrick's Day restriction, the witness said that the hours of opening and closing upon that day, and upon all bank holidays, should be similar to those of Sundays. Personally, he thought that it was a reflection upon our national character to separate the conditions on Sundays and bank holidays from those on St. Patrick's Day by ordering the total closing of public-houses on St. Patrick's Day, and thereby obviously insinuating that there was more temptation to exceed the bounds of sobriety upon that day than on any other bank holiday.

The Chairman—You think that old idea is departed?

Witness—I have no doubt at all about it.

The Chairman—This year the day fell upon a Sunday, and were there any abnormal conditions upon that condition?

Mr. Cussen—No. The first Monday in August was a bank holiday and the houses were open, and the conditions arising upon that day and St. Patrick's Day were about the same. If anything, the cases of drunkenness in the Courts were less than those that followed the August bank holiday.

The Chairman—I agree with you, that the Sunday closing hours should apply to all bank holidays.

Mr. Cussen said that he could see no objection to the transfer of a licence from one set of premises to another if the Justice, after he had heard the views of the Guards and the residents in the locality where it was proposed to transfer the licence, raised no objection.

The Chairman—You have no objection to transferring a licence, say, from a slum to a better-class district, where there was no other licensed house?—None, but as such would mean a monetary gain to the licensed trader, I suggest that provision might be made for payment to the funds of the Saorstat of a substantial sum based, say, on the difference between the valuation of the old and the new premises.

DECREASE OF DRUNKENNESS.

Answering the Rev. Father Flanagan, the witness said that in recent years there was a remarkable diminution in the charges of drunkenness in the Dublin District Court. In October, 1872, there were 47 charges of drunkenness in one day, while at the present time the average was four or five per day.

Mr. Cussen expressed the opinion that the good effects of the split hour in the county boroughs would be increased if it was extended to two hours, and fixed from 3 to 5 p.m.

Sir James Craig—Although you say that there is no necessity for extending exemption orders to the county boroughs, you realise that on certain occasions such exemptions are desirable?—Yes.

I think it is hard lines on people attending football matches to be sent home at 5 o'clock on Sundays without getting any food—I am not referring so much to drink, but to the class that frequents public-houses for food as well as drink. Do you agree with one of the temperance witnesses that if, on these occasions, the hours of opening were changed from 2 to 5 p.m. to, say, 3 to 6 or 4 to 7, there would be a considerable number of drunken motor-drivers on the roads going home?—I should say not. As a matter of fact, the class of people driving motor cars could have the drink in the cars with them, and they would not worry whether the public-houses opened or not.

Sir James Craig—Do you drive a motor car yourself? (Laughter.) You are not satisfied with the statement made here that the majority of Dublin motor-drivers on these days are driving around the city drunk?—No.

Answering Senator O'Farrell, Mr. Cussen said that there were no more cases of drunkenness before the metropolitan Justices after St. Patrick's Day than after any bank holiday, and as St. Patrick's Day fell on a Sunday last year the houses were open for Sunday hours.

Then your experience is that there is no truth in the suggestion that the opening of the public-houses on St. Patrick's Day would result in an orgy of drowning the shamrock? I am satisfied that it would not.

INCREASED SOBRIETY.

In further evidence, Mr. Cussen said that, in his opinion, the increased sobriety of Dublin was due to (1) the increase in the price of drink, (2) the restrictive provisions of the 1924 Act, supervision by the Gardi of licensed premises, and improvement by the licensed trade in the management of their houses. In this connection, he thought that legislation might be introduced to empower Justices to make a special order that a conviction should not be recorded where there were extenuating circumstances and where the offence was trivial.

The Chairman thanked Mr. Cussen for his evidence, which, he said, was most valuable and helpful.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE VIEWS.

The Very Rev. Joseph Flinn, S.J., said that he represented the Catholic Total Abstinence Federation, the Father Mathew Union, and the Pioneer Total Abstinence Association. They were there under protest, as they did not think that the Commission should be called together at all.

The Chairman—The Commission is not here at its own desire. We were called together by the Minister for Justice, and are performing a public duty.

Father Flinn said that he was thoroughly in favour of the "split" hour, and, though it had done a lot of good, it inconvenienced the public in no way. It would have been more effective had it been extended to two hours, as the late Mr. Kevin O'Higgins desired.

As regards the Sunday opening, he would prefer the hours to remain as they are, rather than that power should be given to alter them so as to open from 3 to 6 or from 4 to 7 p.m. He still contended that Sunday closing was the only way to end the abuse.

Father Flinn went on to say that he wished to dissociate himself from the statement made the previous day by a witness against the Gaelic Athletic Association. "I do not know," he added, "what temperance party he spoke on behalf of, but certainly not for any of the bodies I represent. I have had an intimate association with the G.A.A., and I know that it stands for temperance."

The Chairman—I think that the statement was absurd on the face of it. To my knowledge, it is one of the biggest forces for sobriety and temperance in the country.

Father Flinn—My Association never said that it was otherwise. We know that for years it has been a strong temperance party.

The Rev. Father Ryan—The statement is attributed to me, and I did not say anything about that. I said: If it was true that the G.A.A. refused to go to Cork——

The Chairman—What was said by you was that in certain places the G.A.A. conspired with the publicans.

Father Ryan—I did not attribute——

The Chairman—I am not going into that controversy. What you said is in the newspapers to-day.

Mr. Wigham also dissociated himself from the remarks referring to the G.A.A.

Father Flinn, continuing his evidence, said that he did not think that the Police Court charges were a true index of the amount of drunkenness in the country. He thought that there were one hundred cases of drunkenness outside for every one brought before the Justice.

Replying to Sir James Craig, the witness said that he desired to see St. Patrick's Day kept "dry," because he did not want to see it desecrated.

ELEMENT OF COST.

Sir James Craig—You believe that the country will revert to the old method of celebrating the day if Sunday conditions were allowed to prevail?—Yes, if drink gets cheaper.

If it does not, are you still afraid?—Yes; but, of course, not to the same extent.

The Chairman—There is a young generation growing up, and I think that they have an entirely different outlook on this matter. I think the idea that St. Patrick's Day should be celebrated in a "wet" way is gone away altogether.

Sir James Craig—The younger generation have an entirely different view-point generally on the question of drink.

The Chairman—No one should know that better than Sir James. The medical student of the present day is different to the one of many years ago.

On the subject of catering for crowds attending hurling and football matches in Dublin on Sundays, Father Flinn said that at a recent match it was stated that there were 40,000 persons present in Croke Park, but of these, according to the figures which appeared in a newspaper, only about 17,000 were visitors to the city. He thought that, taking into account those who would visit friends or who had made provision for refreshments, only about 10,000 required to be catered for, and the restaurants, if given reasonable notice, would have no difficulty in dealing with that number.

GROCERS' ASSISTANTS' VIEWS.

Mr. Forde, General Secretary of the Grocers' Assistants' Trade Union, said that they believed that the hour's closing from 2.30 to 3.30 was a great hardship to their members, because since the passing of the Act of 1927 there had been a reduction in the number of assistants employed in the County Borough of Dublin of about 190 men, or 18.5 per cent. of the total number then employed. Of this number at least 15 per cent. were unemployed as a direct result of the mid-day closing.

The effect of the closing on the general health of the men had been very serious. Most men were now compelled to have dinner during the hour. Owing to the time necessary for the closing of shops and clearing up and being back in time to open, only about forty minutes was left for men to get their meal. As most assistants were living out, it was almost impossible to get their dinner at all. They, therefore, recommended the abolition of the hour's closing, and suggested as an alternative that the houses be closed at 9 p.m. They were opposed to any change in the Sunday opening hours, and to the application to the county boroughs of the Sunday exemption orders clause. They were of opinion that there should be no alteration in the closing of the public-houses on St. Patrick's Day. With Christmas Day and Good Friday this was the only bank holiday enjoyed by the assistants. They would be glad if the licensed houses were closed in the county boroughs on St. Stephen's Day.

In rural areas they considered that the bona fide clause of the Act should only apply in the summer months.

This concluded the public sittings of the Commission.

Mr. James Henry, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. Kennedy and McGonagle) appeared for the Irish Association for the Prevention of Intemperance.

Mr. Vincent Rice, K.C., T.D., and Mr. G. O'Sullivan, T.D. (instructed by Mr. P. F. O'Reilly), appeared for the Licensed Grocers' and Vintners' Protection Association.

A boy when proceeding to work for a farmer at Dunloy yesterday morning discovered the dead body of an unknown man hanging on a gate at BALLINALOOB, on the Ballymoney-Ballymena road.

NORTH MEATH OATS.

There is considerable alarm and dissatisfaction amongst the farmers of NORTH MEATH at the present price of oats. In one week at Oldcastle market the price has fallen from 14s. 6d. to 12s. 6d. (top), and even this latter price is considered unsatisfactory.

BOTTLES OF ILLICIT SPIRITS.

At CROSSMOLINA (Co. Mayo) District Court yesterday, John Gordon, of Tobermore, a farmer, was fined £50, or six months in jail, for having in his possession two bottles of illicit spirits. Sergeant McCabe found the bottles in a stack of turf within ten yards of the defendant's house.

TALLAGHT LABOURER INJURED.

A labourer, Thomas Redmond, of Kilhinney, TALLAGHT, Co. Dublin, was injured about the head, back and arms when a gate pier which he was erecting at Rosemount, Roebuck, Dundrum, yesterday afternoon collapsed and fell on him. He was taken to the Meath Hospital in the Rathmines Fire Brigade ambulance, and was detained.

CONSERVATORS' PROTEST.

The SLANEY Board of Fishery Conservators passed a resolution strongly protesting against the action of the Free State Minister for Justice in mitigating a fine of £4 imposed on John Donohoe at Bunclody District Court to £2, without giving any reason for the reduction, and against the wishes of the Conservators.

PEMBROKE CHILDREN'S LIBRARY.

Mr. Padraic Colum lectured last evening to the children of PEMBROKE in the newly-opened library on "Hawaiian Stories." The talk was the second of a series organised by the Libary Committee, which has equipped the children's room with a magic lantern and gramaphone. Lectures and recitals will be given each Thursday evening during the winter months.

PRICE OF PIGS.

The live weight price of pigs at ABBEYLEIX yesterday was 59s. per cwt. The price at Mountmellick was 58s. per cwt. Yesterday at Lisbellaw suckers fetched from 45s. to 50s. each. In the Lurgan weekly market pork showed a drop of 6s., the top price being 75s. per cwt. Bacon pigs at Loughrea were purchased at 57s. per cwt. live weight.

OLD WOMAN'S DEATH.

Catherine Dixon (78), who was knocked down by a motor car at West street, DROGHEDA, on last Saturday week, succumbed last Wednesday evening to her injuries. Coroner M. J. Kierans opened an inquest, and, having heard formal evidence of identification, adjourned the inquest pending the criminal proceedings against the driver of the motor car, Mr. MacBride, of Belfast.

A MYSTERY OF LIFE.

"It is one of the mysteries of life how this man was able to go about his work for several years although suffering considerably," commented Dr. James Graham, the BELFAST Coroner, at the inquest yesterday on the body of Joseph M'Comb (56), of Brownlow street. M'Comb died suddenly while filling coal into bags at a local coal yard last Saturday. A verdict of "death from natural causes" was returned.

SIX MONTHS FOR HORSE-STEALING.

At COLERAINE yesterday Judge Osborne sentenced Robert Hanson, alias Gibson, aged twenty, of Shuttle Hill, Coleraine, to six months' imprisonment with hard labour for stealing a mare belonging to James MacAuley, Abbey street, Coleraine. Prisoner pleaded guilty, and the solicitor, appealing for leniency on his behalf, said that he would try to make better use of his life. The Judge said that he had to consider the fact that the prisoner had already served two sentences for larceny.

A CLERGYMAN'S DEATH.

Yesterday afternoon the Rev. Robert Lynn, an aged Presbyterian minister, of FAHAN, was involved in a motor accident, and died shortly afterwards. Motoring with his wife off a by-road on Inch Island, Lough Swilly, his car came into collision with one driven by Dr. Jane McColgan, local dispensary doctor. The impact was slight. Dr. McColgan and the Rev. Mr. Lynn got out, and when inspecting the damage the reverend gentleman collapsed on the road. He lived until after removal to his house, a quarter of a mile away.

FATAL BELFAST QUARREL.

Edward and Henry M'Conville, of 16 Cairns street, BELFAST, brothers, were charged in the Belfast Police Court yesterday with the murder on October 9 of Thomas Higgins (50), a dock labourer, of Abercorn street. The case is a sequel to a dispute in Leeson street, when Higgins received severe head injuries, from which he died in hospital. After further evidence regarding the dispute, District Inspector Scott asked to have Henry M'Conville discharged, and this was agreed to. Edward M'Conville was further remanded in custody for a week.

FATAL MOTORING ACCIDENT.

Last Wednesday evening Peter Kavanagh (27) was knocked down at ASHFORD, County Wicklow, by a motor car driven by Arthur V. Wells, of Northumberland road, Dublin, and killed. Yesterday the inquest was opened by Dr. P. J. Hamilton, Coroner for East Wicklow, and adjourned. The Coroner said that this was the seventh fatal motor accident in which he had to hold inquests in a few months. The driver of the car was arrested and charged by Superintendent Meehan before Mr. L. Lavin, Peace Commissioner, with causing the death of Peter Kavanagh. He was remanded to the Wicklow District Court on bail.

SALMON AND TROUT.

The SLANEY Board of Fishery Conservators, at a meeting in Enniscorthy—General Browne Clayton, Chairman, presiding—passed a resolution, proposed by Mr. J. E. W. Booth, expressing the opinion that the netting of salmon and trout in fresh water is becoming so serious that united action by all Boards of Conservators is the only means of bringing the menace to the notice of the Free State Minister for Fisheries, who should bring in legislation to deal with it adequately. This menace to the salmon and trout fresh water fisheries would drive wealthy visitors away from Ireland just at the time when the fisheries were becoming valuable.

FATAL SHOOTING ACCIDENT.

At an inquest yesterday on the body of Patrick Deburgh Bruce at OMAGH evidence was given by the deceased boy's father, Major Bruce, that his son was found lying in a dressing-room with a wound on the left side and a wound at the back. There was a double-barrelled shot gun beside him, and one barrel had been discharged. The boy had permission to use the gun, as witness was teaching him shooting, on the strict understanding that he would never load the gun. One cartridge was missing from the bag on the top of a wardrobe. Dr. McAllister stated that death was due to shock and hæmorrhage from gun shot wounds, and the jury returned a verdict to this effect, adding that the wounds were accidentally received.

FRAUDULENT CONVERSION CHARGE.

At a Special Court in MULLINGAR, before District Justice Connor, Thomas W. O'Dowd, Auburn avenue, Mullingar, inspector for Mullingar district under the National Health Insurance Commissioners, was charged by the Attorney-General, at the suit of Superintendent Cronin, with fraudulently converting to his own use cheques and sums of money alleged to have been received by him and payable to the National Health Insurance Commissioners. The Justice, having heard the evidence, said that he had no alternative but to return the accused man for trial to Mullingar Circuit Court. Mr. Wallace, State Solicitor, said that he would not object to bail, but the amount must be substantial. The Justice—What is the total amount involved? Mr. Wallace—£624. The Justice fixed bail at £400 and two solvent sureties of £200 each.

CASE OF SLEEPY SICKNESS.

A child named McHale, who was admitted to BALLINA Fever Hospital, has died of sleepy sickness.

THE GAELIC LEAGUE.

At a conference of representatives of the county, held at TULLAMORE, it was decided to establish a central branch of the Gaelic League in Tullamore, and to set up branches in all centres in the county.

REVOLVER SHOOTING COMPETITION.

The annual revolver shooting competition of the Coleraine District R.U.C., which was held at PORTSTEWART, was won by the Portstewart team for the second successive year.

DERRY QUARTERLY FAIR.

There was an average supply in the DERRY quarterly fair yesterday, but trade was dull. The quotations were:—Beef, 38s. to 43s. per cwt.; year-old stores, £8 10s. to £11 10s.; two-year-old stores, £12 to £15; springers, £16 to £24; calves, £1 to £1 5s.; young pigs, 40s. to 45s.

OVERCROWDED 'BUSES.

There were a large number of summonses at LUCAN District Court against 'bus conductors for overcrowding. One of the defendants sent a message from Longford saying that he was being married that day and could not attend Court. Fines varying from 20s. to 10s. were imposed.

MOTOR CAR WITHOUT TAX.

Henry McLoughlin, CLONDRA, was fined £20, reduced to £2, by Mr. Kenny, D.J., at Longford, for using a motor car without having paid the tax. When asked by the District Justice why he used the car without having it taxed McLoughlin said he did not think it was any harm, and he had taken it out of the repair shop the day previous.

SCHOLASTIC APPOINTMENTS.

Two additional masters have joined the staff of Royal BELFAST Academical Institution. They are Mr. R. B. D. French, B.A., and Mr. J. O. Bartley, B.A. Mr French is a First-Class Honours Graduate in French and English of Trinity College, Dublin, with subsidiary History and Geography. Mr. Bartley is a Second-Class Honours Graduate in English of Queen's University, Belfast, with subsidiary Latin and French.

A PRIOR ENGAGEMENT.

At LUCAN District Court yesterday, when a case was called in which a woman was summoned for having been drunk at Lucan, Sergeant Magrath said that he had a telephone message from her solicitor, saying she could not attend Court as she was otherwise engaged. The Justice—What engagement has she? The Sergeant—She has to appear in the city court, your worship. (Laughter.) A fine of 20s. was imposed.

DUNGARVAN FAIR.

A large number of buyers attended DUNGARVAN Cattle Fair. The cattle shown were in good condition, and dealings were numerous. Three-year-olds sold for £15 to £19; two-year-olds from £12 to £14 10s.; yearlings from £7 to £10 10s. There was a good supply of sheep, which sold for £2 10s. to £3 10s.; lambs from £1 15s. to £2 5s. Store pigs were in demand, prices paid being £2 10s. to £4.

BLIND MAN IN COURT.

At DOWRA District Court an instalment order was sought against a man named Con Dolan, Blacklion, Co. Cavan, by Messrs. John Woods and Company, 89 Victoria street, Belfast, for goods supplied to the amount of £16 19s. 6d. Sergeant Kelly, Civic Guards, Blacklion, said that Dolan was a blind man, who travelled round with a donkey and creel. Payment at the rate of 2s. 6d. per month was ordered, and £1 1s. costs allowed.

NEW PEACE COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. J. C. Reynolds, dentist, Leinster street, ATHY, has been appointed a Peace Commissioner for Kildare and adjoining counties.

Mr. Charles G. Warner, Boden Park, RATHFARNHAM, has been appointed a Peace Commissioner for the County Dublin and adjoining counties. Mr. Warner has for the past thirty years carried on an extensive dairying business at Ballyboden. Under the old régime he was a Justice of the Peace.

HARBOUR SCHEME.

At a special meeting of BALLYCASTLE Urban Council a letter was read from the Ministry of Commerce respecting the proposal of the North of Ireland "L. and N." Company, Ltd., to provide, in conjunction with the authorities concerned, harbour accommodation at Ballycastle. The letter stated that a definite decision from the company had been requested before the end of the month. The Council decided to await further developments.

"RECORD" ROD CATCH.

At ACHILL on September 30, Dr. O'Donel Brown, Naas, and Mr. Gavan Tyndall, Naas, landed two of what were probably the largest fish ever caught on rod in the United Kingdom. They were two parbeagle sharks. Mr. Tyndall's weighed 336lbs. Its length was 8' 6, girth 48'', tail spread 2' 6'', and dorsal fin 12''. Dr. Brown's weighed 309lbs.; was 8' 2 in length, with a girth measurement of 47½''; the tail spread was 2' 6'', and the dorsal fin 12½''. The fish were not weighed until 24 hours later at Achill Sound.

ADMIRAL'S VISIT TO BELFAST.

Admiral Sir William Goodenough, K.C.B., has arrived in BELFAST to fulfil a series of engagements in connection with the British Sailors' Society, of which he is a director and the new Chairman of the Board. Yesterday he attended the dedication of the memorial chapel at the Sailors' Rest, Dock street, which he declared open. The furnishing and equipment of the chapel was undertaken by the Balmoral Ladies' Guild, of which the Countess of Clanwilliam is the President. There was a large attendance at the Service, in which the following clergymen, representative of different Protestant denominations in the city, participated:—The Rev. Samuel Cochrane, B.A., Hon. Chaplain, R.N.; the Rev. P. W. N. Shirley, M.A., B.D., Rural Dean, and the Rev. John W. Stutt, North Belfast Mission.

ADULTERATED WHISKEY.

At LUCAN District Court yesterday Elizabeth Brooks, Cooldrinagh, was summoned by Guard Ryan, Inspector under the Food and Drugs Act, for having sold to him a sample of whiskey which on analysis was shown to be 33 per cent. under proof. Mrs. Brooks said that she was away from home when this sample was taken, her husband being in charge. A boy was attending in the shop at the time, and this boy was still in her employment. Justice Reddin convicted, and Miss Early, solicitor (who prosecuted), said that there had been a previous conviction for a similar offence. Mr. John Sheil, solicitor (who defended), said that on the last occasion the assistant was on his way to America forty-eight hours after the service of the summons. A fine of £4 was imposed, with costs, the conviction to be recorded on the licence.

SPIRIT GROCERS' LICENCES.

At LUCAN District Court yesterday an objection was raised by Superintendent Hughes to the renewal of the spirit grocer's licence of Mr. Joseph Dowd, Lucan. Mr. Dowd said that he had been licensed for forty-two years, and there had been no conviction against him for the past three years. He said that he sold other things besides drink in the shop. Justice Reddin granted the application and renewed the licence. Superintendent Hughes also objected to the renewal of the spirit grocer's licence attaching to Mrs. O'Brien's house at Ballydowd. Sergeant Magrath said that there had been no trade done in the house for six years, as Mrs. O'Brien was over eighty years of age, and although the licence had been paid, the shop was not kept open. The premises were in good condition. Mr. C. W. Russell, solicitor (for applicant), contended that the circumstances were exceptional on account of the age of the licence holder, who was eighty-two when she died. The Justice granted the application.

THE "BANSHEE."

At TALLOW (Co. Waterford) District Court, William O'Keeffe, labourer, Kilcronat, was charged with setting fire to a rick of hay and some clothing, the property of Denis O'Keeffe, and to sixty yards of a furze ditch, the property of William Higgins. Thomas O'Keeffe, brother of the accused man, said that the defendant had a dispute with him about the tenancy of their father's cottage. Witness got it from the Board of Health, and the accused man left. At 3 o'clock in the morning, a couple of months ago, witness heard the crooning of a banshee around the house, followed by tapping at the kitchen and bedroom windows. He recognised his brother's voice and found a pane of glass broken in the morning. Having heard further evidence, Justice Farrell said that the evidence would not justify a conviction or sending for trial before a jury. But he would put a stop to midnight prowlings of the banshee. He would bind the accused man to the peace, himself in £20 and two solvent sureties of £10 each. If the accused man failed to get the sureties, or broke the peace, he would go to jail.

WATERFORD EXHIBITION.

SO SUCCESSFUL THAT IT IS BEING EXTENDED.

INTEREST IN ARTS AND CRAFTS.

Increasing interest is being manifested in the Waterford exhibition as the days go by. Large crowds continue to attend daily and nightly, and so successful has been the venture that the promoters have now decided, by special request, to extend it till to-morrow evening. Demonstrations of wireless, vacuum cleaners, and of the uses of electricity are given daily, while the Shannon model may be seen in the basement of the Town Hall.

One of the most interesting exhibits and one which attracts large crowds is that of the Waterford Central Technical Institute. Here special stress is laid on technical education, in arts, as well as in crafts. Remarkably beautiful examples of the pupils' work are shown in Sheraton style cabinets, tables and bookcases, all beautifully finished and polished.

Oil paintings, water colour drawings, plaster busts from life, pen and ink sketches, etc., are prominent in the art section, whilst metal work, woodcraft, fretwork, wood panelling and machine drawing are indicative of what is being done in the trades preparatory schools.

Needlework, embroidery, and cooking are also well represented.

Samples of Waterford made beers, ales and stout are being shown, and all barrels containing the samples are manufactured in local cooperages, whilst barley is shown as raised in Irish counties.

Builders' materials, church erection, metal casting, stone dressing are displayed by local builders, while the making of brick from original clay to finished product is demonstrated.

Choicest specimens of Waterford bacon, hams and lard are shown.

Of historic and modern interest is the Harbour Commissioners' stall, which displays models of modern ships trading with Waterford. In contrast are pictures of old Waterford sailing schooners, Alexander, Martha, and Rapid, captained by the hard-fisted, hard-swearing skippers of the type so ably portrayed by Clarke Russell. There are ships of pre-modern times, such as s.s. Clara, built in 1868, and the old paddle steamer, s.s. Kilkenny, whose maximum steam pressure was 10lb., reminiscent of the days when steam as a marine power was in its infancy here, and when it was regarded as an auxiliary to sails rather than as a primary motive power.

Interesting facts are also given at this stall, as for instance: 400,000 tons cargo and over 200,000 animals are annually exported and imported at the port; £125,000 is paid annually in wages, or £2,500 weekly.

The slogan is: "Support the Port and the Port will support you."

DUBLIN SEAMEN'S INSTITUTE.

DEBT OF £6,000 ON THE BUILDING.

The second day of the sale of work in aid of the Dublin Seamen's Institute was opened by Lady HolmPatrick in the Metropolitan Hall yesterday.

Lady HolmPatrick said that the Institute was opened in 1921 as a memorial to the victims of the Leinster, and as a tribute to the war service of the men of the Mercantile Marine. The memory of those dreadful years was a sufficient reason for helping and maintaining the Institute. There was a debt of £6,000 on the building itself, and an annual deficit of some £150 on running expenses. Since all classes, creeds, and nationalities are assisted by the Institute, it is every one's business to help. (Applause.)

Captain Webb, R.N.R., Harbour Master of Dublin, in introducing Lady HolmPatrick, recalled that the former Institute, a "little corrugated iron shack," was burned down in 1916. The site of both that and the present institute was once occupied by a publichouse named the American Bar, a favourite haunt of seamen. Sailors are welcomed with or without money in the Institute. There is no distinction of creed or breed.

The Rev. W. Popham Hosford, Superintendent for Ireland, said that the Missions to Seamen's Institute in Dublin was just one branch of the great Society operating in one hundred and twenty-one ports all over the world. Only last week an officer and his wife came into the Dublin Institute. The officer had just returned from a voyage lasting eighteen months. His daughter, now going to school, he had only had an opportunity of seeing twice in her lifetime. This was an illustration of the loneliness of sailors' lives.

Reserve of Strength

EVEN with modern high power cars, driving, under certain conditions, entails a considerable amount of fortitude. This will certainly be so if your car is not equipped with tyres made to withstand fierce acceleration, rapid de-clutching, hard braking, and, above all, poor unmade roads. The 'Fort' Dunlop tyre is produced to meet these conditions, where an extra reserve of strength is not only a safeguard but a necessity.

It was stated at last night's meeting of the Rathmines Municipal Technical Institute that the number of students who had entered for the 1928-29 session was the largest in the history of the Institute.—(Page 8.)

It is announced that a committee may be set up by the Irish Free State Ministry for Agriculture to investigate and report on the proposal of the Grain-Growers' Association that millers should be compelled to use a 15 per cent. admixture of home-grown grain in maize grinding.—(Page 7.)

There was a large attendance of delegates from various parts of the country at the annual meeting of the Ard Fheis of the Fianna Fail organisation in Dublin yesterday.—(Page 11.)

FINANCIAL

London Stock Markets were very weak. Prices declined all round.—(Page 12.)

Lombard street was amply supplied with credits, and borrowers satisfied their over night requirements at 5 per cent. and under. Bill rates were easy. The Bank bought £1.617 in bar gold.—(Page 12.)

In Dublin the market was depressed. Rails were slightly better.—(Page 12.)

The Socialist Menace.

Now that the leading figures in the British Cabinet have completed their excursions into foreign affairs, and—

even the ranks of Tuscany
Could scarce forbear to cheer,

the real test of the Labour Government is at hand. In matters of foreign policy there never was any reason to doubt that a Socialist Minister would be patriotic, and the surprise that was caused by Mr. Snowden's firm stand at The Hague hardly was fair to the Chancellor. Now Labour Ministers must tackle domestic problems, which will demand the exercise of totally different gifts, and will expose, for better or for worse, the true value of the Socialist programme. They have made an exceedingly bad start. Since the new Government came into office it has been harassed by the Miners' Federation, headed by that notorious fire-brand, Mr. A. J. Cook, who has been pressing for a reduction in colliers' hours. On Wednesday the Cabinet decided unanimously to grant virtually the full demand of the miners. Early in the new year mining hours will be reduced. The Miners' Federation will be allowed to choose whether hours shall be seven and a half per day, plus what is known as "winding time," or eight hours from bank to bank. This change will involve a reduction of half-an-hour in nearly every district, but it will not be accompanied by any "cut" in wages. The Government also has undertaken to "nationalise" all mining royalties and to consider at an early date the possibility of provision for colliers' pensions.

Not only the coal trade, but all British industry, is in a parlous condition. The situation in the coalfields is particularly bad. Thousands of miners are out of work, without hope of re-employment. Many pits have been forced to cease operations, and foreign competition has compelled the owners to reduce their export prices to such an extent that profits have vanished. In these circumstances the Miners' Federation has bullied the Government into a ruinous policy. The proposal to reduce the miners' hours is sheer madness. Since the war the greatest handicap that the coal industry has been forced to bear has been its high production costs. French, German and Polish miners have been working for a fraction of the wages that have been paid to their British comrades, with the result that British coal has been unable to compete against supplies from the Continent. Admittedly, the wages of colliers in Britain are not high, but they still are considerably higher than continental wages; in any case, they are greater than the industry can afford to pay. A reduction in hours of labour is tantamount to an increase in wages, which, in turn, automatically raises costs. Does the Government realise the implications of its policy? Surrender to the miners, doubtless, will be followed by surrender to other trade unions, every one of which wishes to better its members' lot. The thin end of the socialist wedge has been thrust under the fabric of British industry. Can Parliament sanction such a threat?

Simultaneously with its decision to reduce the miners' hours, the Government has issued the text of an amending bill to extend the scope of the existing Pensions Act. If this measure becomes law, more than £47,000,000 will be paid at the average rate of £8,000,000 per annum to widows and others during the next few years. Who will provide the money for these new pensions? At present a large percentage of the inhabitants of Great Britain is being supported, in one way or another, by the State. More than 1,500,000 men and women are out of work, and these persons, with their dependents, constitute at least one-tenth of the total population. If the Government persists in its present policy, the number of parasites on the State will increase and multiply until finally the whole social system will become top-heavy. A halt must be called. No community could continue to carry the burden that has been imposed on Great Britain during the last fifteen years. A National Debt of more than £7,000,000,000 has been incurred. Industry has been bled almost white by a scale of taxation that knows no parallel; and now the Government is making further demands upon the taxpayer's purse. What will be the use of Mr. Snowden's "triumph" at The Hague or of Mr. Macdonald's achievements at Washington if the country's trade and commerce are ruined? "Socialism in our time" is a poisonous doctrine, and, if Parliament does not check the Government's activities, the Empire's future will be imperilled.

Memory and Hope.

The beginning of the Great War was marked by a crime which shocked civilisation. German troops, advancing through Belgium, burnt the library of Louvain University, and destroyed an irreplaceable wealth of letters. After the war American subscriptions built a new library, and the American architect, Mr. Whitney Warren, placed on the principal balustrade a Latin inscription which recorded that the building, "ruined by German fury," had been "restored by American generosity." The Rector of the University, Monsignor Ladeuze, disliked this inscription and removed it, whereupon Mr. Whitney Warren applied for a legal injunction against him. The court's verdict, which was given on Wednesday, is in the architect's favour, and the Rector must replace the inscription within eight days. Educated Americans ought to regret—and probably will regret—this decision. The graciousness of gifts is marred when the beneficiaries must pay compulsory tribute to the givers' kindness. An uninscribed library would have kept Belgian gratitude untainted. The boast of this inscription may obtrude the cynical thought that the War, which impoverished Europe, enriched America beyond the dreams of any avarice save her own. Moreover, Mr. Whitney Warren's legal victory raises a wider question. Ought the stigma of a nation's crime to be advertised in perpetuity? We know that the burning of Louvain was a horrid outrage. We know that the wages of sin is death, and that the sins of the fathers are visited on the children; but is refusal of forgiveness good policy—is it moral economics—in a world whose peace depends on tolerance, adjustment and compromise? Beyond any question the average German to-day is heartily ashamed of the colossal villainy at Louvain. Will the monumental gibe at "Teutonic fury" make him the more, or the less, ready to acknowledge his country's guilt? In these matters it is always the fighting men themselves who have the right instinct—

At once, in peace, the injuries of war.

An East African Campaign dinner will be held in London at the beginning of December. General Smuts, who commanded the British forces in the campaign, will preside, and will toast the guest of the evening. That guest will be his brilliant opponent in the struggle—General von Lettow-Vorbeck, who surrendered only after the signing of the Armistice, and left the beaten field with the honours of war. The invitation has the warm approval of all the British admirals and generals who took part in the campaign. Both General Smuts and General von Lettow-Vorbeck have fought against the British Empire, and they have fought against each other. The Louvain inscription strikes a strangely discordant note in a time of reconciliations and forgivenesses. A world which is pursuing the abolition of war ought to travel hopefully, and has no need of backward-pointing signposts.

Bond Street.

It has been said that every human being passes at least once in his time through Piccadilly Circus, and the same thing can be said of Bond street. The pre-eminence of certain thoroughfares in the popular mind is a comforting antidote to the exuberant success of modern "publicity." Our attention is drawn to this or that centre, and we rush, sheep-like, in our obedience to the command of often unknown tyrants. In a few years—if not sooner—the novelty wears off, and another "stunt" claims our notice; yet such as Bond street ever remain. Indeed, without Bond street London would be less even than Hamlet without the Prince of Denmark. Prince Arthur of Connaught, at the fourth annual dinner of the Bond Street Association, succinctly summed up the position. "After all," he said, "there is only one Bond street in the world; Bond street is unique." Even to-day, while motor 'buses make their noisy progress along its thoroughfare, it is possible for the imaginative to capture the old traditions. The exquisite of the late eighteenth century and the bucks and Corinthians of the Regency are discernible under the "bowlers" and "Homburgs" of the present day. Yet all this tradition has grown up around some historic shop. Founded on the old family lines, a firm builds up its connection, and its success draws to the neighbourhood other retailers. The polite world, conscious of these amenities, repairs hither for its needs, and the adjacent pavement becomes an al fresco club. While there is only one Bond street, every city has its equivalent, and by its standard the prosperity of that city may be judged. Grafton street in Dublin has an international name, and its prosperity or otherwise is a barometer of the Free State's standard of living. The casual visitor, when he returns home, does not speak of a capital city's galleries or museums. Its principal street is the burden of his praise or blame. Let us treasure, then, our Bond streets and Grafton streets; for their value is great.

The Afghan Throne.

A message from Kabul to the Afghan Chargé d'Affaires in London confirms the rumours of Nadir Khan's election malgré lui as King of Afghanistan. It appears that the National Assembly recorded an unanimous vote, and, in view of Nadir Khan's services to his country, we are not surprised. Formerly he was King Amanullah's Foreign Minister, and, when last January his nephew's throne was usurped by Bacha-i-Saquao, the ex-water carrier, he was living in comfortable retirement in the South of France. His country's call, however, was not in vain, and, with his two brothers—Shah Wali and Mahmud Khan—he undertook the overthrow of the usurper. Contrary to his own wishes, Nadir has been summoned to the throne, and it would accord ill with his high reputation if he should refuse to accept the charge. We are reminded of a parallel from Oriental history. Sultan Amurath II. twice laid down the cares of empire for the pleasures of Magnesia, and twice was recalled to power by his country's need. A Giaour invasion and a revolt of the Janissaries forbade him to entrust the heritage of Othman to his young son, Mohammed, who later was destined to become the conqueror of Constantinople. Sultan Amurath died in harness, and, if we may judge from the condition of Afghanistan, the lot of the Amir Nadir is likely to be the same. Many tribes already have tendered their allegiance, and the final rout of the usurper's forces suggests that the worst is over. Nevertheless, in that primitive country the tinder of revolt always is dry, and Britain's interest is served best by a strong ruler. We welcome the election of the Amir Nadir Khan in that his merit has been proved in the fire of experience. "Let the king reign."

OVERLOADED 'BUSES.

OWNERS' DEPUTATION TO MINISTER OF JUSTICE.

A deputation from the Irish 'Bus-Owners' Association, consisting of Major Waller, Mr. E. P. O Caoimh, Mr. H. E. Gresham and Mr. T. W. Berkerry, Secretary, attended on the Minister for Justice in Dublin yesterday in reference to the question of over-loads on 'buses during the "rush" hours of the day and on special occasions.

The deputation pointed out to the Minister that it was in the public interest that a certain number of people should be allowed to stand on the 'buses, as was the general practice elsewhere, and that, provided the additional numbers were restricted, it would not be dangerous. At the same time, it was stated that the Association was not in favour of wholesale over-loading, as it damaged the 'buses and caused discomfort to the regular passengers.

THE TRAMWAYS.

The Minister's attention was drawn to the fact that the tram-cars appeared to be allowed to overload without fear of prosecution, and, so long as the regulation was being infringed by the tramway men, under the eyes of the 'bus employés, it would continue to be extremely difficult for 'bus owners to ensure observance of the regulation by their employés.

It was also pointed out to the Minister that at specially stated hours in the city, and on fair and market days in the country, it was very difficult to avoid overloading.

PENDING LEGISLATION.

The Minister, having listened very carefully to the points put before him by the deputation, intimated that he could not in any way interfere with the law as it stood, and, if it was deemed necessary to allow the 'buses to overload, the law would have to be amended accordingly.

He stated that, in view of pending legislation, it would be better to wait for some time and see how things worked out, and then the Association could approach him on the matter again.

WEATHER FORECAST.

General Inference. A depression centred between the Faroes and Norway is moving slowly east, while an anticyclone North of the Azores extends towards the British Isles. A northwesterly air current is being established over the country, and there will be bright periods, with some showers locally, and a somewhat lower temperature than of late. A depression indicated South of Greenland may affect our North-Western districts after to-day.

Ireland, all Districts.—Wind west or north-west, moderate or fresh; bright periods; some showers; moderate temperature.

Irish Sea and St. George's Channel.—Wind north-westerly, moderate or fresh; bright periods, but, perhaps, showers; sea moderate.

THE POPE AND IRISH CATHOLICS.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.
ROME, Thursday.

The Pope to-day gave an audience to Monsignor McNeely, the Bishop of Raphoe, and Monsignor O'Brien, Bishop of Kerry, and showed great interest in their respective dioceses.

His Holiness also inquired about the Irish pilgrims, who are still sightseeing here, and heard with interest that a reception in their honour was being given this afternoon by Monsignor Hagan, the Rector of the Irish College in Rome. He said that he had followed with great satisfaction the building of the new college, of which he had seen the plans and photographs.

LONDON LETTER.

THE KING AND ARMISTICE DAY.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
THURSDAY NIGHT.

It was announced this afternoon, on official authority, that the King will not be present at the Armistice Day Service at the Cenotaph and that his place will be taken by the Prince of Wales, who will place a wreath on the Cenotaph on behalf of His Majesty. It is stated by a Court official, who saw the King recently, that he is looking extremely well and that he intends to remain at Sandringham for the present. The announcement will be received with a feeling of relief by many people, particularly those inclined to think that the chill from which the King was suffering last November was accentuated by his standing bare-headed for so long at the Cenotaph ceremony.

Royal Interest in Philately.

The King sent some of the rarest specimens from his collection of stamps for exhibition to-day to the Fellows of the Royal Philatelic Society. He sends annually a selection of stamps from his famous collection for exhibition at this meeting, and this year he selected a number of the Malta issues. The King takes no casual interest in philately, but is acknowledged to be an expert. British Empire stamps are his special study, and he has a unique collection, including many rarities, of which only one or two examples are known. In the stamp room at Buckingham Palace there are over two hundred volumes containing the Royal collection, which is now worth a great sum of money.

Women and the Motor Show.

Olympia this morning was one of the most brilliant places in London; for, in addition to the bright sunshine, it was illuminated by countless thousands of electric lamps, the light of which was reflected again from a thousand points of brass plate and steel, to say nothing of the brilliant varnish to be seen on so many of the saloon cars. The most costly car in the show is a big American saloon, which can do one hundred and sixteen miles an hour, and for which three thousand four hundred and fifty pounds are asked. To-day the show was well attended, the majority of the visitors being women, and it would not be too far-fetched to say that it is the women's motor show. Women were everywhere, and, in their inspection of the cars, many of them showed an acquaintance with the inner workings which surprised their male escorts and even the salesmen.

Saorstat Coinage and the L.M.S.

Rumours that the officials of the London, Midland and Scottish Railway have refused to accept the coinage of the Irish Free State in payment of fares and charges have reached London, and, the point being of some importance, I made inquiries at Euston as to the facts of the case. It seems that nothing is known there of the matter. Irish Free State money is taken in Ireland and on the boats crossing the Channel, while Irish Free State Currency notes are accepted without question in this country in the ordinary way of business. No instructions have been issued anywhere that the Irish Free State coinage should not be taken, and the officials are at a loss to understand a reason for rejection of it.

Insurance Against Increased Taxation.

In City financial circles just now the course of National Revenue returns is being watched with almost anxious interest, and a most unusual thing to happen so early in the financial year is that inquiries are being made at Lloyd's as to the possibility of insuring against increased taxation next year. It has not escaped notice that the ordinary expenditure of the Government from April 1st to October 12th of this year is four and a half millions more than in the same period of last year, while the revenue has fallen off to the extent of one million pounds. It is impossible to see how this matter will be righted before the end of the financial year, and the possibility is that the Chancellor of the Exchequer will be faced with a deficit. With the position of the revenue return must be coupled the growth of unemployment, which continues.

Bishops and the 1928 Prayer-book.

The bishops of the Church of England, it appears, have an agreed and cast-iron policy which they are now applying. This fact was commented upon to-day by a high authority in a letter issued by the Archbishop of York, demanding that all deviations from the Book of Common Prayer which are disallowed by the Book of 1928 shall cease. This is an indication that the bishops will permit clergy to go as far as the rejected Book permits, but it does not mean that they have decided that the revised Prayer-book shall be the standard Book for use in the Church—a point of great interest, as that Book gives permission to the clergy to continue practices to which a great number of Church people take exception.

Pensions Bill and Industry.

The details of the Widows, Orphans and Old Age Pensions Bill, published to-day, aroused comment in business quarters, and Sir John Corcoran, the Director of the National Union of Manufacturers, in criticising the proposed measure, said that the outstanding consideration arising out of the bill is the recklessness with which expenditure is being piled on the country at a time when the vital need is to reduce the burden of taxation on industry. In Great Britain we are paying £3 18s. 6d. per head of the population for social services, as against 13s. in France, 5s. 6d. in Belgium and 3s. in Italy, while in the United States the cost of social service is not a charge on the national funds at all.

R 101 and Civil Aviation.

Another trial flight of R 101 is to take place to-morrow, when the airship will leave the mooring tower at 8 a.m. and travel until about 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Lord Thompson, the Minister of Air, is to be a passenger, accompanied by his secretary, and he proposes to carry out a normal day's work while the vessel is in flight, as he would if he were in his office. The Air Ministry's report on civil aviation, which was published to-day, gives some interesting figures regarding the need for civil pilots. The total membership of thirteen light airplane clubs on December 31st last was 3,288, an increase of fifty per cent. on the previous year. The increase in the number of civil pilots is reflected in the increased number of privately-owned aircraft, of which 176 were in service on December 31st as compared with 110 last year. Excellent though the results of the subsidised light airplane movement has been, it has been for some time apparent that in the existing scheme only a small proportion of the widespread and great demand for flying training and facilities could be met.

M. Chaliapine.

It seems that Dublin is not to have the pleasure of hearing M. Chaliapine next week; for he is at home in Paris suffering from a severe chill, which will prevent him from travelling for some days and from singing at the concerts arranged for him in Ireland. He will try, however, to carry out his engagement to sing at the Albert Hall on October 26th, but this will be his sole appearance here for some time to come.

Firemen climbed a crane on the roof on Harrods, Knightsbridge—150ft. above the street—to extinguish a fire in the operator's hut. As the hose pipes would not reach so far, a large skip full of water was hoisted up and tipped over the flames.

AFGHANISTAN'S NEW RULER.

ELECTION OF NADIR KHAN.

TRIBES REPENT.

HABIBULLAH'S ARMY AGAIN DEFEATED.

Reuter's Agency learns that the Afghan Chargé d'Affaires in London has received a despatch from the Afghan Ministry of Foreign Affairs, announcing the unanimous election of Nadir Khan by the National Assembly as King of Afghanistan.

The Afghan Chargé d'Affaires has sent a despatch to Kabul expressing his allegiance to the new King.

Reuter's Agency is informed that a telegram despatched from Kabul yesterday, and explaining the present situation in Afghanistan, has been received by the Afghan Chargé d'Affaires in London from General Shah Wali Khan, commander of the army which, after defeating the troops of Bacha-I-Saquao, now occupies the town of Kabul.

The telegram states that three days after the successful occupation of Kabul the General's troops bombarded the Arg, where Bacha-I-Saquao had taken refuge. As a result of the bombardment Bacha fled together with his family and a few of his officials.

Some of Bacha-I-Saquao's troops also have fled, while others have surrendered to the General, to whom also most of the Ministers of Bacha-I-Saquao went over.

PROVINCES COME TO HEEL.

The people of Kohdaman (Bacha-I-Saquao's province), having repented of their misdeeds, have received generosity, kindness and leniency at the hands of the new Government.

The provinces of Jelalabad, Khoft, Kabul, Hazarajat and Kandahar have accepted the supreme authority of Marshal Mohammed Nadir Khan.

As regards the other provinces of Mazar, Qadagghan, and Badakhshan, Maimana and Herat, it is stated that these provinces are disgusted with the régime of Bacha-I-Saquao, and are awaiting instructions from the Government at Kabul.

AMANULLAH'S MESSAGE.

Reuter's Agency learns that on the occupation of Kabul by Marshal Nadir Khan the Khyber Union of Great Britain sent a telegram of congratulation to ex-King Amanullah in Rome.

The ex-King replied as follows: "Thanks for your telegram. Anyhow, my wish is the independence and progress of Afghanistan.—AMANULLAH."

MAN WHO WOULD NOT BE KING.

NADIR KHAN ELECTED IN SPITE OF HIMSELF.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BOMBAY, Thursday.

The Afghan Consulate here has received a cable, dated Kabul October 15th, from Shah Wali Khan, the brother of Nadir Khan, stating that the National Assembly, by a majority, has elected Nadir Khan King of Afghanistan.

The election took place in spite of Nadir Khan's persistent refusal and excuses, as a recognition of his personal sacrifices in the cause of national service.

[NOTE.—Nadir Khan, formerly King Amanullah's Foreign Minister, was living in retirement in the South of France when King Amanullah was deposed from the throne of Afghanistan last January.

Amanullah was succeeded by his brother Inayatullah, who only reigned for three days, and was deposed by Bacha-i-Saquao, a brigand chief, who made himself Ameer and assumed the name of Habibullah Khan.

Nadir Khan returned to Afghanistan and took the field against Habibullah. After a confused campaign his brother, Shah Wali Khan, entered Kabul on Sunday, October 6th, and Habibullah and his family fled.]

FLEEING ARMY AGAIN DEFEATED.

NEW FOREIGN MINISTER APPOINTED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

MOSCOW, Thursday.

The semi-official Tass Agency states that, according to a report from Termez, the forces of Marshal Nadir Khan, pursuing the Kugistanis, defeated them near Kalamuradbek, which is seventeen miles north of Kabul. Habibullah himself is stated to have been in command of the defeated army.

The population of Kukhdamen and Kugistan have been ordered to submit and to surrender their arms. Several tribes have already announced their readiness to submit to the new Government.

According to another report from the same source, says the Tass Agency, Nadir Khan has appointed Faiz Mohammed Khan, Minister of Education in ex-King Amanullah's Government, as acting Foreign Minister. No other Ministers have yet been appointed.

The appointment of the Foreign Minister is regarded by those in close touch with the latest conqueror of Kabul as evidence of his intention to preserve Afghan independence.

FLY-WEIGHT CHAMPIONSHIP.

AMERICAN WINS ON POINTS.

At the Royal Albert Hall, London, last night, Frankie Genaro, of America, defeated Ernie Jarvis, England, for the world's fly-weight boxing championship. The contest went the full fifteen rounds, and Genaro won on points. Jarvis had the misfortune to have one of his eyes cut early in the bout, but for all that he fought very pluckily, and towards the end of the fight he was doing just as well as Genaro. The latter, however, had such a commanding lead on points that Jarvis had no chance to win, save by a knock-out, and this he never looked like accomplishing.

The giant Italian, Carnera, made his first appearance in an English ring, when he met the English heavy-weight, Jack Stanley, in what was announced as an eight rounds' contest, but it only lasted 100 seconds, during which time Stanley was on the boards three times, and when he went down on the last occasion the referee stopped the fight.

Both these contests are fully described on Page 13.

INDIAN CIVIL SERVICE EXAMINATIONS.

SUCCESSFUL IRISH CANDIDATES.

Among the candidates selected for appointment to the Indian Civil Service as the result of the open competitive examination held in London last August, are:—

J. Booth, of Clongowes Wood School, Co. Kildare; Balliol College, Oxford, and London University.

G. P. Stewart, of Portora Royal School, Enniskillen, and Trinity College, Dublin.

IRISH BACON INDUSTRY.

PROBLEM FOR THE TRADE.

A STANDARDISED ARTICLE.

A survey of the marketing of pigs and pig products and of the prospects for the development of Empire trade in these products is published to-day by the Imperial Economic Committee in London.

Great Britain, it is pointed out, is the largest importer of pig products in the world, and the market therefore offers tremendous opportunities to Empire countries. At present the whole of the overseas Empire contributes less than one-seventh of the total imports into the United Kingdom. Canada and the Irish Free State are the two overseas Empire countries mainly concerned in the export of pig meat to the home market, and New Zealand is developing an increasing trade in frozen pork. In 1927 the value of the import trade amounted to £54,500,000, of which no less than £46,200,000 came from foreign, as opposed to Empire, countries.

NORTHERN IRELAND.

ROLLED BACON TRADE.

The report deals with pig production in Ireland, and, referring first to Northern Ireland, states that the number of pigs there in 1928 was 229,000, or about 10 per cent. more than in Scotland.

The majority of the pigs kept are of the Large White Ulster type. This uniformity of type arises from a peculiarity in the Northern Ireland trade. The Large White Ulster, possessing a thin skin and very deep sides, is considered in Ireland as specially suited for making "rolled bacon." This is a somewhat similar product to the Ayrshire roll, but distinguished from it by the removal of the hams and shoulders before curing. The chief markets for it are in the North of England and around Glasgow. It postulates a pig of a rather heavy weight from 168 to 196lb. dead-weight. The maintenance of the general quality of the stock is assisted by the fact that the Ministry of Agriculture, Northern Ireland, restricts its grants for premium boars to those of the large white Ulster and large white Yorkshire breeds.

EXPORT TRADE IN PORK.

In addition to this speciality Northern Ireland exports pork to Great Britain. By 1928 the exports of this article had risen to 66,000 cwts. The trade is small, but many firms participate in it. The development of this trade will require operations on a larger scale and on a more organised system, to ensure greater regularity in supply and uniformity of quality.

In the large white Ulster, Ireland thus possesses an animal well suited for a specialised bacon trade, but not well suited for the "Wiltshire-cut" side trade. The exports of bacon, hams and pork through Northern Ireland ports have increased steadily during the four years, 1925 to 1928.

EXPORTS FROM NORTHERN IRELAND PORTS.

	Thousands of Cwts.
Bacon	138	145	193	214
Ham	87	77	100	120
Pork	9	10	40	66
Total	234	232	333	400

Some of these exports are pigs raised in the Irish Free State, but cured in Northern Ireland factories.

The bacon trade from Northern Ireland is largely specialised for the production of rolled bacon, but there is the same need for organisation and co-operation between producers and curing interests as in other parts of the Empire. We understand from evidence given to us that no serious opposition would be offered to legislation providing for the grading on export of carcases or bacon.

IRISH FREE STATE.

IMPORTANCE OF EXPORT TRADE.

The Irish Free State competes in the general pork and bacon trade of Great Britain. The problems before it are very similar to those which confront the industry in England and Wales As in England, pig production has varied very considerably from year to year. Although fluctuations continue, Irish farmers are now more ready to remain in the trade than formerly. Throughout the period of falling prices in 1927 they retained their breeding stock and did not send large numbers of sows to slaughter.

This increasing steadiness in production is largely the result of the more definite linking of dairying with pig keeping and of the extension of "mixed" farming. The reorganisation of the dairying industry and the establishment of new creameries have already resulted in a considerable expansion of dairying. It is anticipated that this will help both to stabilise and to increase pig production.

The scope for extension is great. Even in some of the best dairying districts—as County Limerick—pig stocks are relatively low. The separated milk is, in many cases, not returned from the creamery to the farm, but used for condensing. This practice is attributed to a general unwillingness of the farmers to take trouble over pigs, though the Department of Agriculture consider that the farmer would find it more profitable to retain the separated milk and rear pigs.

MARKETING.

In the Northern Counties of the Irish Free State the practice of slaughtering the bacon pigs on the farm and placing the dressed carcases on the market is generally adopted. The carcases are purchased by merchants resident in these Northern Counties, or in Northern Ireland, for conversion into rolled bacon, a product for which a considerable trade has been established in Scotland and Northern England.

Over the remainder of the country—Midlands, South and West—the system of marketing live bacon pigs obtains. The supplies of bacon which reach the British market direct from the Irish Free State are drawn mostly from these areas. As may be expected, the districts in which dairying has been intensively developed in the South and West supply the largest proportion of the pigs, and these are the districts in which grain crops (oats and barley) are chiefly produced. It has been demonstrated that home-grown barley can be advantageously marketed in the form of pigs, particularly in seasons when the demand from brewers and distillers is poor and prices consequently low. The encouragement of the production of home-grown cereals for feeding purposes would seem well worth while.

IMPORTANCE OF EXPORTS.

In 1927 the exports from the Irish Free State totalled more than £44,000,000. The export of primary agricultural produce—live animals and meat—accounted for £34,000,000, or nearly 80 per cent. of the whole. Of this some £33,000,000 worth was consigned to Great Britain and Northern Ireland. The exports to Great Britain of live pigs, bacon, hams, fresh pork and sausages were valued in 1927 at £5,000,000, considerably less than one-quarter of the value of the imports of Danish bacon into Great Britain in that year. Yet the Irish Free State has natural advantages for production and is

LORD THOMSON AND R 101.

BRITAIN'S LEAD TO THE WORLD.

REPLY TO HOSTILE CRITICISM.

Lord Thomson, British Air Minister, speaking at the annual dinner of the Institution of Mechanical Engineers, at Connaught Rooms, London, last night, said that he hoped to join the R 101 that night after leaving them. The only risk he feared was the motor journey to Cardington in the dark. (Laughter.)

"I am told by our experts that R 101's engines have more than surpassed expectations; that we, as Britons, have really, in this experiment, given a lead to the whole world; for the engines use a fuel with a flash-point of 215 degrees Fahr., which flows satisfactorily at one degree Fahr., and which for the same weight gives 25 per cent. more range to the airship, and costs one-fifth of the price of petrol. This is our contribution not only as an Air Force, but as British engineers, to the solution of the problem of flight, which is of incalculable significance to the development of transportation throughout the British Empire.

ILL-INFORMED CRITICISM.

Mr. Alan Charlton, who designed the engines of R 101, said:—I cannot help making some references to the ill-informed criticism in the Press regarding the R 101. In that airship, to those who know it—and I know the details fairly well—there has been achieved by wonderful team work something that the nation ought to be proud of. (Cheers.)

"I am very disturbed to see the spirit of the criticisms which the papers have made, but I have no doubt we have accumulated something which will be of value to mechanical engineering."

Lord Thomson, referring to the publicity gained by the Air Force, said:—"I have never myself been very conscious of it, except from the point of view that we have many critics. I think it is fair to say that certainly seventy per cent. of the publicity of the Air Force, and notably of a certain activity of the Force, has been entirely due to hostile criticism. Do not imagine for a moment that the Force seeks publicity for the sake of publicity. A great deal of it has been forced upon us.

TO-DAY'S FLIGHT.

When R 101 leaves Cardington early this morning on her second trial flight it is expected that the wind will be west to north-west. This will give the Midlands an opportunity of seeing the great airship. Major Scott will fly up-wind, and this should take him over Northampton, Birmingham and towns further north. He will circle and come back over Derby and Leicester.

Major Scott will test the ship at increased speed, and, with the four engines running, he hopes to attain a speed of between sixty-five and seventy miles an hour.

THE HATRY CASE.

CONFERENCE DAY IN COURT.

Clarence Hatry and his three co-directors made another appearance at the New Court, Guildhall, London, yesterday, and were remanded until next Monday, on a charge of conspiring together, between July 1st and September 20th, 1929, to obtain £209,141 by false pretences, and with intent to defraud, from Mr. George Ireland Russell, of Porchester Trust, Ltd.

Hatry's three associates are Edmund Daniels, of Woodford House, Kingston avenue, Leatherhead; Albert Edward Tabor, of Shottisham, Woodfield lane, Ashtead, Surrey; and John Graham Goodfellow Dixon, of St. Helier, Temple avenue, Oakleigh Park, N.

The proceedings lasted only a minute.

As soon as Sir George Truscott had taken his seat he announced that the adjournment was simply for the purpose of giving the defendants a chance of consulting their legal advisers here unfettered, and also for them to have a talk with Sir Gilbert Garnsey, as they had promised to do. Sir George said that the defendants would remain in court until 4 p.m.

Hatry and his companions then settled down for their conference at a long table. Their lunch was brought to them from a restaurant Within a minute of Sir George's departure from the court they were smoking cigarettes.

ITALIAN ATTEMPT FAILS.

The Italian airmen, Maddalena and Cecconi, took off at 7.22 this morning from Montecelio Aerodrome, near Rome, in an attempt to establish a duration "record" and also to improve upon the world's distance "record" for a flight over a closed circuit, a "record" at present held by Italy. They had to abandon their attempt after nine hours' flying owing to the breakdown of the pump in the water circulating system.

WOMEN AT THE MOTOR SHOW.

CRITICAL EYES ON NEW MODELS.

IRISH VISITORS.

INTEREST IN THE LIGHT "SIXES."

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

LONDON, Thursday.

The attendance at Olympia to-day for the opening of the Motor Show was necessarily below the number expected to be present on other days, as the tickets for admission were priced at ten shillings, but, even with the charge at this figure, there were crowds round the principal stands, and to view any particular model involved a wait until other spectators had made way and passed on to other exhibits.

It was noticeable that most of those present to-day had definite objectives. They went first to the stand they most wanted to see and then to the next on their list. They were not mere sightseers of the Show as a spectacle, but had come to Olympia with clear views as to the exhibits which they should study, and they proceeded to make their investigations with due thoroughness.

THE LIGHT "SIXES."

The new light six-cylinder cars attracted most attention. People had come specially to see them, and, from the opening of the Exhibition onwards, there was a constant stream of interested inquirers. The light six may not quite come up to the four-cylinder car with regard to petrol economy, but it has advantages of its own where fuel consumption is not regarded as the most important consideration. It is only recently that six-cylinder cars have been produced with engines of moderate size. Consequently big size and heavy fuel consumption have been associated with the description, and it is now becoming more generally realised that the new light sixes are not nearly so thirsty as had been supposed.

Petrol consumption has been cut down on the new cars owing to lighter total weight compared with engine power and to various improvements in mechanical details. The new cars have created interest, therefore, not only because they are light sixes, but because they incorporate modern ideas in other matters, particularly in methods adopted by the manufacturers to reduce weight and eliminate vibration.

A satisfactory feature of the first day of the Show was the obvious revival of several firms of long-standing reputation in the industry which had shown signs in recent years of not quite holding their own. The new models of several old firms attracted sufficient interest to indicate that they have regained their old positions and have merited their revival by the excellence of their productions.

THE EAGLE EYE.

Women formed a large proportion of the visitors to-day, and they were to be seen making close inspections of the models. It has been said that women's influence is responsible for the eclipse of the open touring car by the saloon, and it is certainly true that enclosed cars are becoming more and more popular each year. Most of the models that were centres of the greatest interest to-day were saloons, and the women who inspected them carried out their task in no cursory manner.

On approaching a car a woman would first look at it, not only from the side or the front, but also from other angles, and would sometimes comment favourably or otherwise on the shape of one part or another. Then she would enter the car, noting in doing so the ease with which that operation could be performed, and would take her place in the driving seat, where there would be much comment as to the position of the controls and the arrangement of the instrument board.

With a man this would have in most cases concluded the inspection, but the woman had other ideas. In the case of a four-seater saloon she would want to occupy in turn each of the four seats, not only alone, but with three others in the car, and in one case it was observed that, where one salesman was showing the car to a man and his wife, another representative had to be called from the stand to take a place so that there should be an occupant for each of the four seats.

In this connection it may be stated that women will this year be far more pleased than on previous occasions, for there is definitely more room in most of the cars.

Some of the bodies have become far more spacious owing to the chassis having been just slightly lengthened to allow the coachbuilder to make the most use of the extra space, and in many cases he has made surprisingly good use of the small additional area allotted to him.

BETTER "FOURS."

Next to the interest in the light sixes, the most noticeable feature of the day was the satisfactory changes made in the four-cylinder models. Some of them, though retaining the same mechanical features, look very different with their new bodywork, particularly where the radiator design has been modernised, as it has been on several well-known cars.

The large, luxuriously fitted cars, too, were not neglected, and improvements in carriages of this category are as important as in cars of smaller size, and they have the added advantage of affording more scope to the coachbuilder, as he has not to work to restricted limits in weight and size.

Briefly, the Exhibition shows that the new big cars are more luxuriously equipped than ever, and the smaller models are more efficient and possess a greater degree of symmetry of outline than in any previous year.

Owing to new regulations there will be fewer salesmen on the stands this year. There is much controversy in the trade at the restrictions, and it has been suggested that agents who formerly had access to the stands, and who are not now permitted on them, may not visit Olympia; but it is hoped that no friction will develop in consequence of the altered conditions.

IRISH VISITORS.

There are fewer Irish agents on the stands, but among the representatives from Dublin at Olympia to-day were Mr. P. McEntaggart at the Citroën stand; Mr. J. Garland, who was at the Humber and Hillman exhibits; Mr. Denis Keegan, of Messrs. Denis Keegan, Ltd., at the stand of the Swift Company; Mr. W. R. Archer at the Standard Company's stand, and Mr. P. J. Tracy at the stand of the Delage Company.

A total of 6,602 people paid for admission to the Show to-day, compared with 7,912 last year.

DUBLIN CATTLE MARKET CONTRACT.

The tender of Messrs. P. J. Watchorn and Sons for the construction of new offices at the Dublin Cattle Market, at a cost of £488, has been recommended for acceptance by the Dublin City Commissioners.

At Howth District Court a warrant was issued for the arrest of a witness whose evidence was required in a charge against a Balbriggan man described as a "cow doctor."

GRAIN-GROWERS' DEMAND.

COMMITTEE MAY BE SET UP.

MR. HOGAN'S REPLY TO DEPUTATION.

A committee may be set up by the Irish Free State Ministry of Agriculture to investigate and report upon the proposal of the Grain-Growers' Association that millers should be compelled by law to use a 15 per cent. admixture of home-grown grain in maize-grinding. Failing the appointment of a special committee, the question will be brought before the Tariff Commission for consideration and report.

This was the gist of an announcement made by Mr. P. Hogan, Minister for Agriculture, to a deputation of grain-growers yesterday.

President Cosgrave and Mr. Hogan received the deputation, the members of which were:—Mr. James Dwyer, T.D.; Mr. Frank Aiken, T.D.; Mr. Aird, T.D., and Dr Ryan, T.D.

Speaking to a previous deputation, the Minister indicated his complete opposition to a tariff on grain, and said that the feeding of grain to live-stock is a much more valuable way to dispose of surplus grain than its sale. He asked the deputation to consider the matter in the light of the discussion.

On October 3rd the deputation reported to a conference of the Grain-Growers' Association at Maryborough, when several speakers urged that the only way to get an increased price for barley was by protection.

Mr. Frank Aiken said that the scheme for an admixture of 15 per cent. of home-grown grain with maize for milling might not be an ideal one, but it was a step in the right direction. If they could not get a tariff on barley, this was the next best thing.

Mr. Morrisey, T.D., said that the proposal was a step in the right direction, and, if it were given effect, it would have useful results. He added that even if they had a tariff on barley Messrs. Guinness and the other brewers could fix their own prices. He thought that the real reason why the grain-growers were not getting a good return for their produce was because they were not all combined and united.

During yesterday's discussion Dr. Ryan, T.D., and Mr. Frank Aiken, T.D., declared that there would be no point in establishing a committee to investigate the matter because the facts were well known.

Before the deputation left Mr. Hogan stated that copies of the terms of reference would be forwarded to every member of the deputation.

GERMANY AND OPIUM TRAFFIC.

GENEVA AGREEMENT RATIFIED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BERLIN, Thursday.

It is announced here to-day that the Geneva Opium Agreement, with its protocol, has been ratified by Germany, and comes into force on November 13th. The documents of ratification have been deposited with the archives of the League of Nations.

The agreement provides for a permanent Opium Committee, consisting of eight independent experts, which will watch continually over the movements of narcotics, and can recommend an embargo on export to a country which threatens to become the centre of illegal trade. It is hoped that the carrying out of the agreement for measures of control will help considerably towards the suppression of the international smuggling of narcotics, which is still proceeding on a large scale.

THE SINO-RUSSIAN CONFLICT.

SOVIET REPLY TO GERMAN PEACE EFFORTS.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

MOSCOW, Thursday.

According to the official Tass Agency, the Foreign Commissariat handed to the German Embassy to-day the Soviet reply to the German proposal for a mutual cancellation by the U.S.S.R. and China of the repressive measures taken against private individuals in connection with the Chinese Eastern Railway conflict.

The Note thanks the German Government for its initiative, and states that "The Soviet Government is unable to accept the German proposal, which does not lead to a desirable object, since the Nanking Government ignores its obligations and promises, and still refuses to display good-will and readiness loyally to observe agreements.

THE BATTLE ON THE AMUR.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

HARBIN, Thursday.

A Chinese communiqué says that Chinese naval and military forces recaptured Lingkianghsien, at the confluence of the Amur and Sungari Rivers, from the Soviet forces on Monday evening.

After describing the events leading to the Soviet withdrawal, the communiqué states that the Soviet marines looted the granary at Lingkianghsien before withdrawing.

TOKYO, Thursday.

Military experts here believe that the Russians withdrew after raiding Lingkianghsien practically unopposed.

The Russians justify the raid as a reprisal for the Chinese attacks on Soviet navigation in the region of the confluence of the Amur and Sungari Rivers. The sensational rumours hitherto received were apparently based on exaggerated accounts of this raid.

[NOTE.—Lingkianghsien was occupied by Russian forces on the previous day after a river engagement in which a number of gunboats were sunk and several hundred Chinese drowned.]

PEACE EFFORT IN CHINA.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

SHANGHAI, Thursday.

Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang, the Manchurian war lord, replying to Sir Robert Hotung's cable suggesting a round table conference of the Chinese military leaders with a view to the prevention of renewed civil warfare, agrees that the resumption of hostilities can only lead to the ruin of the country, and promises his wholehearted support for the scheme.

Sir Robert Hotung is the Hong Kong financier who some years ago was behind a similar move to settle the differences between the various war lords. Two days ago he sent identical telegrams to General Chiang Kai-shek, head of the National Government at Nanking; General Yen Hsi-shan, the so-called "model Governor" of Shansi; General Feng Yu-hsiang, the Kuominchun leader, and Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang.

DUBLIN YOUTH'S SEVERE INJURIES.

LATE NEWS.

BY SPECIAL ARRANGEMENT WITH "THE TIMES."

INDIA'S EDUCATION PROBLEM.

THE HARTOG REVIEW.

The Times to-day refers to the review of the growth of education in British India, which it describes as a document of unusual interest and importance. It observes:—The official report, extensively quoted in the Hartog review, produces the impression that—outside the Punjab, where real progress has been made—Indian secondary and higher education is recovering rather slowly from the bad tradition which emanated from Calcutta. The Education Departments of the provincial Governments are clearly dissatisfied with the results of their attempts to improve the curriculum and teaching in the secondary schools. In many of the private schools the old evils persist, and are enhanced by the teachers' insecurity of tenure and irregular, or inadequate, pay; but, if the instruction of the "masses," rather than of the "classes," is henceforth to be the chief educational aim of the Indian provincial Governments, they will have to remodel their present system.

Waste and inefficiency are widespread. It is a depressing picture, and all the more so when it is remembered that education became a transferred subject in 1920, and since then has been confided to Indian Ministers and to increasingly Indianised educational staffs. As the Hartog Committee admit with regret, the divorce between the Central Government of India and education is almost complete.

But, if primary education in a great part of India is manifestly in bad case, what can be said for the suggestion, apparently made in several passages of the report, that universal compulsory primary education should be the goal of the Indian Provincial Governments? The ideal is attractive. It appeals especially to those who believe that electoral capacity depends upon literacy—a theory which does not command universal assent. It appeals on less general grounds to the Indian Ministers in charge of this "nation-building" department in each Provincial Government, who are laudably anxious to produce important results in the shortest time possible. But though other passages emphasise the need for caution in educational planning, and describe the numerous obstacles to the "expansion" of primary education, the impression may be given that universal compulsory education is a goal "within the reach of at least the wealthier provinces of India."

All the relevant facts enumerated in the report point to the contrary conclusion—namely, that the whole system of primary education in most provinces of India requires a thorough and costly overhaul; that, if educational reform is to be introduced, contraction must precede expansion; and that, given the recent history of education in India, the attempt to achieve universal compulsory education in a hurry may in practice perpetuate the sacrifice of quality to quantity of education—to impressive and misleading statistics—which is far too frequent to-day.

PATENTS IN IRISH FREE STATE.

WORK OF REGISTRATION OFFICE.

Official statistics issued by the Free State Industrial and Commercial Property Registration Office for the month of September, 1929, deal with the Patents and the Trade Marks Branches. These statistics in future will be issued monthly.

The Patents Branch during September received 86 new applications, of which 76 were foreign and 10 from the Free State. The specifications accepted numbered 24; patents granted, 22; patents lapsed, 73; patents expired, 5; and applications to register British patents, 54.

The Trade Marks Branch during the month received 60 applications for registration of new marks, and of these 55 were of foreign and five of Free State origin. Eight applications were accepted and advertised.

AN IRISH INVENTION.

Among the accepted specifications is one by an Irish inventor, Mr. E. C. Bredin, of Inchicore, Dublin. It is a device for assisting the loading of heavy road vehicles on railway vehicles. There may exist a considerable difference of level between the railway platform and the floor of the truck, and in order to enable the road vehicle to be transferred easily the inventor provides a platform trolly, mounted on spring castor wheels. A transfer trolly runs on rails on the platform trolly, fitted with ramps, up which the road vehicle is driven, first on to the platform trolly, and thence on to the transfer trolly. Detachable rails connect the platform trolly with the floor of the railway truck, and up these the transfer trolly, with the road vehicle upon it, is propelled either by hand-power or otherwise. The transfer trolly then is secured to the railway truck, and accompanies the road vehicle on its journey, being thus available for unloading on to a second platform-trolly when it reaches its destination.

A somewhat alarming-looking device, described in one of the accepted specifications, is the invention of a German; it is designed for filleting fish, and has four high-speed revolving knives, which automatically slit the fish in an ingenious way and allow the bones to drop out.

Printed copies of the first sixty Irish Free State patent specifications are now available to the public at a uniform price of one shilling, and are on sale at the Industrial Property Office, 45 Merrion square, Dublin.

It is learned from the Official Journal that the acceptance of new trade-mark applications is now proceeding, and it is understood that the first registrations will be effected during the coming month. This is an indication that the normal work of the office is being undertaken.

In the issue of the 25th ult. was published the acceptance of several new trade mark applications of a well-known Irish tobacco firm. The registration of trade marks may be opposed within one month from their publication in the Journal.

IRISH LINEN DELEGATION

RECEIVED BY MAYOR WALKER.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Thursday.

The delegation of Irish and Scottish linen manufacturers, who are making a study of American merchandising methods, returned here from Washington, where they were presented yesterday to President Hoover, who laid stress on the value of international industrial missions in promoting world friendships.

The visitors were received this afternoon by Mr. Walker, the Mayor, in the City Hall. The delegation will leave for Chicago during the week-end.

DUBLIN HOSPITAL ESTIMATES.

In a report made by Dr. W. C. Dwyer, Dublin City Commissioner, it is pointed out that provision in the estimates for the year to March 31, 1929, for the treatment of infectious disease cases at the Cork street and the Hardwicke Hospitals has been exceeded by £2,166 14s.

Mr. F. Hanlon, of the Department of Industry and Commerce, has been appointed a member of the Inter-Departmental Committee on Coast Erosion, in place of Mr. F. J. Cawley, who has been appointed Secretary of the Irish Free State Legation at Paris.

TWO PREMIERS MEET.

MR. MACDONALD IN OTTAWA.

EXHAUSTED FROM HAND-SHAKING.

FROM THE PRESS ASSOCIATION'S SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

OTTAWA, Thursday.

For the first time since Mr. Macdonald and his party left England in the Berengaria rain fell when they were in Toronto yesterday evening. The Prime Minister and his party joined their special train after dinner, and shortly before eleven all retired for the night.

The night journey was very smooth and comfortable, and was disturbed only by the shrieks of engine whistles sounding in salute as the train passed the various sidings and stations.

Day dawned clear and somewhat cooler.

The Prime Minister's party were early astir, getting ready for their arrival in Ottawa. Breakfast was taken on the train, and at half-past nine the special steamed into Ottawa.

ARRIVAL AT OTTAWA.

At the station the Premier was welcomed by Mr. Mackenzie King, the Prime Minister of Canada, and by Sir William Clark, High Commissioner in Canada for Great Britain.

Mr. Macdonald, on descending from the train, appeared already to have benefited by the bracing journey. He stepped briskly through a scarlet-clad "Canadian Mounted" contingent, which was temporarily on foot.

Mr. Macdonald is spending the afternoon alone with Mr. Mackenzie King at his country retreat at Kingsmere, twelve miles from the city, where the two Prime Ministers will discuss weighty questions, particularly affecting Canada, arising from the Washington talks.

Miss Ishbel is attending a "Welcome" tea in the afternoon, and in the evening the whole party will be guests of the Government of Canada at a dinner at Parliament Buildings, where Mr. Macdonald is expected to make a speech of especial interest to the Dominions.

PREMIER'S WEARY HAND.

After to-night's official dinner by the Government of Canada at Parliament Buildings, Mr. Ramsay Macdonald is going to make a determined effort to keep down formal engagements to the minimum. The excessive amount of hand-shaking in America has compelled the Prime Minister to ask for some restriction on this method of greeting in the future, and, in addition, the arrangements for the civic reception on his arrival at Montreal on Monday have been modified in deference to his desire to save his energies.

OUT OF THE LIMELIGHT.

On Tuesday Mr. Macdonald is proceeding to Chicoutimi, on the Saguani River, primarily for the purpose of investigating the great water-power development of North America, but the fact that the special train is being halved to accommodate only the Prime Minister's own party indicates that he is seeking a final relaxation by cutting out any record of his movement for two days.

Mr. Macdonald is to leave Chicoutimi on Wednesday night, nad will sleep in the train, which is due to arrive at Quebec on Thursday. He sails for England on Friday next at 4.15 p.m.

A bitter wind has now sprung up, and there are flurries of snow alternating with sunshine.

A LEGION MESSAGE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

MONTREAL, Thursday.

On behalf of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League, General Sir Arthur Currie, the President, has sent a message of greeting to Mr. Ramsoy Macdonald, offering their sincere cooperation in his efforts to secure peace among the nations. The message says: "We speak of peace with the authority of service. As we shared in our Empire's struggle for victory, so we will support every effort for everlasting peace."

£6,000 NECKLACE STOLEN.

THEFT FROM LONDON SHOP.

A pearl necklace, valued at £5,000 to £6,000, was stolen from the Regent street, London, shop of Messrs. Fraser and Haws yesterday afternoon.

The necklace is believed to have been stolen by two foreign-looking men, who visited the shop shortly after mid-day. They were attended to by an assistant, who showed them a selection of rubies, rings and pearls. The men, however, went out of the shop without making any purchase.

Immediately after they had left the necklace, which was on a stand just inside the shop window, was missed.

The necklace consists of seventy-one graduated pearls, with a single stone diamond clasp, and has a total weight of 614.72 grains.

THE RATHMINES INSTITUTE.

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL YEAR.

MORE STUDENTS THAN EVER BEFORE.

The annual distribution of prizes in connection with the Rathmines Municipal Technical Institute took place last night in the Town Hall, Rathmines. Mrs. Benson, Vice-Chairman of the Technical Instruction Committee, presided, and there was a very large attendance.

PRINCIPAL'S REPORT.

The Principal, Mr. G. J. T. Clampett, in the course of his report on the work of the school for the 27th session (1928-1929), stated that the individual students enrolled in the school of commerce and in the school of domestic economy numbered 1,867 (581 men and 1,286 women). A comparison with previous sessions gave the following results: 1902-03 (first session), 303; 1913-14, 927; 1917-18, 1,202; 1926-27, 1,746; 1927-28, 1,749. The figures for 1928-29 thus created a record over all previous sessions.

THE STUDENTS.

The number of class entries was 5,734, and the attendance hours, 189,477—an average attendance per student of 101 hours. 24.6 per cent. of the students were over 14 and under 17 years of age, 25.4 per cent. were over 17 and under 20 years of age, 36 per cent. were between 20 and 30 years of age, and 14 per cent. were over 30 years of age. Therefore, 75.4 per cent. of the students were over 17 years of age; that was to say, that the Institute catered for students who had passed the school age. These students, on the whole, had made up their minds as to the type of occupation they wished to adopt for their future careers. The majority were already employed, but they came to the Institute to help them along a definite road of effort to the ultimate goal of success.

Of the sutdents, 38 per cent. resided in Rathmines township, 31.5 per cent. resided in the City of Dublin, and 30.5 per cent. in adjoining townships and other districts. The Inspector reported:—"The very high standard of work and progress associated with the Institute has been well maintained this session. The enrolment was the highest on record. The students were of a very good type, and the teaching and general organisation were excellent."

CLASS ENTRIES.

In connection with the institute there were entrance scholarships, continuation scholarships, a day apprentice scholarship scheme, a day trades' dressmaking scholarship scheme, and scholarships in Irish. The number of class entries in each subject of instruction were:—

Day Department—Day secretarial course, 676. Introductory course—Girls, 365; boys, 162—527.

Evening Department—Introductory course, 348; junior commercial subjects, 964; higher commercial subjects, 1,086.

Languages—French, 173; Irish, 231; German, 46; Spanish, 23; English, 93. Total—4,167.

The School of Domestic Economy absorbed 750, or 40 per cent. of the students enrolled in the institute.

The committee had under consideration the erection of a new lecture hall, and it was hoped that the work might be started almost immediately. Increased classroom accommodation was their most pressing need, and the erection of the new lecture hall would only in part solve the difficulty. The addition of a new storey to the existing building was a matter that should be considered in the very near future.

Mrs. Benson then presented the prizes to the successful students.

COMMERCIAL TRAINING.

Mr. P. J. Lawrence, Chairman, Dublin Port and Docks Board, proposing the adoption of the report, said that he had listened to many reports in his time, but he could safely say that he had never listened to a report on any subject which had been so embracing, so lucid and satisfying. He congratulated Mr. Clampett and his staff on the principal work done. As a commercial man, he attached great importance to commercial training, and he was glad to see that this was made a special feature of the Rathmines School. He was not in a position to state if in that school any time was devoted to the development of character or to the training of the moral faculties. If provision was not made for such training, he feared that there was serious danger that the thoroughness, the efficiency and the value for which the school stood would not be attained.

Would anyone suggest that in the preparation of a boy for a commercial career no attention was to be given to the cultivation of truthfulness, honesty, cleanliness, alertness, politeness, courtesy, cheerfulness, good temper, respect for superiors, etc.? Were their commercial enterprises staffed as they should be? They were not. The indifference to the interests of their employers shown by some employés was appalling. They need never hope for a high standard in commerce, or a high standard of citizenship, so long as people in employment failed to realise that the interests of their employers were largely their interests too.

A BONUS WITHDRAWN.

Mrs. Kettle (Chairman of the Rathmines Urban Council) said that the Committee regretted that the Government had withdrawn the bonus to part-time teachers. Mr. Lawrence had spoken of the necessity for moral teaching. She could assure him that all the teachers in the school did this character teaching while imparting "book" knowledge to their students.

The Rev. J. J. Macaulay said that if the schools did not do more than turn out efficient bankers and careful housekeepers he would not be satisfied. He thought that the action of the Minister of Finance in withdrawing the grants for part-time teachers mean and false economy.

Mrs. Mulcahy, supporting the adoption of the report, said that it was an excellent one.

Dr. Burke, Inspector of the Department of Education, said that he had the privilege of inspecting the school during the week, and he congratulated all concerned on the high standard displayed in every department.

COAL OWNERS MEET MINISTERS.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT.

After a three hours' conference at Downing street, London, yesterday afternoon, between the coal owners and the Cabinet Coal Committee, the following official statement was issued from No. 10 Downing street:—

"The Lord Privy Seal, the President of the Board of Trade, the Minister of Labour, and the Secretary for Mines met representative coal owners at No. 10 Downing street at 3 p.m. to-day. The situation in the mining industry was further considered, and the discussion was adjourned to a later date.

"The coal owners drew attention to certain unofficial statements in the Press concerning the negotiations at No. 10 Downing street with the mining industry yesterday. The Lord Privy Seal authorises an official denial of these statements as being inaccurate and without foundation."

Enquiries in official quarters last night failed to elicit any information to identify the particular statements, which are denied by the Lord Privy Seal.

The alleged interview with the Dowager Queen Marie of Rumania, which appeared recently in a Vienna newspaper, and which purported to give strong criticisms made by her upon the Rumanian Government is denied by Her Majesty.

BRAY EX-SERVICE MEN'S CLUB.

NEW PREMISES OPENED.

The new club premises of the Bray Branch of the British Legion of Ex-Service Men were formally opened yesterday evening at 12 Goldsmith's terrace, Quinsboro' road, Bray. The club's premises comprise the rooms in the basement of the house, and include a billiard and card room, a room for women's work, and "Poppy and Relief" offices. There is no bar.

Major J. J. Tynan presided at the opening ceremony, which was attended by a good gathering of both the men's and women's sections.

Before proceeding to business those present solemnly observed "the two minutes' silence" in memory of their fallen comrades.

Major Tynan then said that their first duty was to pass a resolution of sympathy with the relatives of the late Earl of Meath. Most ex-Service men, he said, and many not connected with them, could recollect the wonderful work which the late Lord Meath had accomplished in the interests of ex-Service men and of the British Empire at large.

A resolution of condolence with the Brabazon family was adopted, on the motion of Mr. Gilroy, seconded by Mr. Oley.

Major Tynan then said, concerning the new club premises, that the atmosphere in which they now met compared with the old hut in which they had formerly to discuss their problems and difficulties, was very cheering to come into. The people who had been concerned in the securing of this new habitation deserved every praise and credit. As one of the ladies who had been most prominent in promoting Legion interests, he would ask Mrs. MacSeveny to declare the club open.

Amid applause Mrs. MacSeveny said that she had much pleasure in stating that the club was now open for the business and pleasure of the members.

Major Tynan said that he would like to mention the names of two other ladies, Miss Le Fanu and Mrs. MacGowan, who had done much good work in the interests of the branch, and that the branch had a £50 capital credit at the bank. The General Purposes Committee was representative of both sections of the branch, and the trustees were Captain Gelvary and Mrs. MacSweny. He thought that there was a good future for the branch. They had got rid of the bar. Bars in most clubs were nothing but a curse or a nuisance. Where there was no bar there was no trouble, and he hoped ex-Service men would now fulfil their duty by supporting this club.

Mr. M. J. Nolan, adminstrative agent, Dublin, congratulated the members on the enormous improvement in the club premises. Referring to the Relief Committee's work, he said that it was unpopular, because it could not give relief to everybody; but he could assure them that the Benevolent Fund Committee thanked those ladies and gentlemen for the good work they had done. He would remind them that in the Irish Free State in 1924 the sale of poppies had produced £3,645, and that they had received back £4,940 for relief purposes. This year the sale had produced about £9,000, and up to 30th September they had received £16,000 for relief, which had been disbursed through the country. It was not possible to relieve all distress. They tried to give some little help in all the more urgent cases. Unemployment amongst ex-Service men was appallingly high, and they were trying to start small industries to give some relief. In Youghal they had started a small fishing industry, and in Bray they were beginning with a window cleaning company, which it was hoped would be a success on its merits. He wished their club success, and had no doubt that it would be run on business-like lines.

CHRISTIAN UNITY.

SYNOD'S MESSAGE TO SCOTLAND.

A meeting of the Home Reunion Committee of the General Synod of the Church of Ireland was held at 52 St. Stephen's Green, Dublin, on Wednesday, His Grace the Primate presiding. Also present: The Bishop of Cork, the Bishop of Down, the Bishop of Limerick, the Dean of Christ Church, the Archdeacon of Connor, Canons Baillie, Gibbon, Kingsmill Moore; Messrs. J. Bristow, W. J. Buchanan, J. P. Burkitt, J. R. Scott, D.L., and Canon Drury, Hon. Secretary.

The following resolutions were passed unanimously:—(1) That this meeting of the Home Reunion Committee of the General Synod rejoices in the movement towards union among the Churches of Southern India, and hopes and prays that it may be brought to a successful issue. (2) That the Home Reunion Committee, realising the great importance of the proposals for the union of the Southern Indian Churches which are now being discussed, and also the fact that the whole question of reunion will be brought before the Bishops at Lambeth next year, most earnestly request the clergy to consider these matters at their various clerical meetings, to bring them before their people, and to ask them for prayer and study in connection with these most important subjects; and that this resolution be sent to all the clergy of the Church of Ireland.

MESSAGE TO SCOTTISH CHURCHES.

With regard to the recent celebration in Edinburgh of the reunion of the Scottish Churches, the Primate stated that at the request of himself and the Archbishop of Dublin, the Bishop of Cashel went to Edinburgh bearing the following greeting on behalf of the Church of Ireland:

To the Presbyterian Church of Scotland:—

The Archbishops and Bishops of the Church of Ireland, with the clerical and lay representatives, forming together the Standing Committee of the General Synod of the Church, send by the hand of the Right Rev. Robert Miller, D.D., Bishop of Cashel and Waterford, most hearty congratulations upon the great act of unification which has been accomplished in the bringing together into one Communion of Churches which for so many generations stood apart in distinct and separate bodies.

They recognise that this most notable consummation has been reached as the result of the growing realisation of the Lord's Will and of an earnest desire to further His purpose for His people.

They trust that this example of faith and love, crowned with a most blessed attainment, will stir up other Churches to a holy emulation, and pray that it may prove the beginning of the world-wide movements towards the unity for which the Master prayed.

CHARLES F. ARMAGH,
JOHN DUBLIN.

Presented by me, Robert Cashel and Waterford.

ELECTION PETITION CHARGES.

Three boys from the Ballard Institute, the club provided at Plymouth by Mr. A. C. Ballard, the millionaire philanthropist, gave evidence at the hearing yesterday of the petition to unseat Mr. J. J. H. Moses, Labour Member of Parliament for the Drake Division of Plymouth.

One of the allegations by petitioners is that Mr. Ballard, by his benefactions to the boys of the town, influenced voting in favour of Mr. Moses. Bribery and corruption are among the other alleged irregularities.

Mr. Roland Oliver, K.C., opening the case for the petitioners, said that after a long investigation there remained no personal charge against Mr. Moses.

Mr. Oliver alleged that Ballard promised the boys a great "do" at the Institute, with refreshments and prizes, if Mr. Moses got in, but threatened that if he did not get in the Institute would be closed. Mr. Moses attended the Institute during the campaign, and knew perfectly well what was going on.

The hearing was adjourned.

IRISH BACON.

nearer to the chief market than its rival. It is a question of exploiting those natural advantages and favourable position by organisation and improved practice.

It is estimated that about seventy-five per cent of the pigs raised in the Irish Free State are exported. Great Britain and Northern Ireland are practically the only markets. Thus:

	Total Exports.	To Great Britain. £000's.	To Northern Ireland.
Live pigs	2,318	2,171	147
Bacon	2,265	2,155	106
Fresh pork ...	1,279	624	655
Hams	67	49	12
Sausages	2	1	1
Other pig meat	89	87	2
	6,020	5,077	923

As will be seen, about sixty per cent. of these exports were live pigs and fresh pork. Most of the live pigs exported are bought by bacon curers in England, although many are slaughtered for the pork trade. In 1927 nearly 400,000 pigs were exported alive, as compared with 700,000 delivered to Irish curers.

FRESH PORK SUPPLIES.

The diversion of a supply of young pigs in 1926-27 for the newly-created pork trade was at first regarded as a serious menace to the bacon and live pig export trade. After a short time the stimulus afforded by the pork trade resulted in greatly increased production of pigs, so that both the bacon and live pig trade benefited. The best Irish products are well suited to the English market, though complaints as to faulty packing, lack of grading, and unsuitability of some consignments were at first heard. The difficulties have been to a considerable extent surmounted. The experience has been somewhat similar to that in the dairying trade, and various trade associations in the Irish Free State have, as a consequence, asked for legislation similar to that governing the export of dairy produce.

We understand that a draft bill has been prepared providing for export under licence only, registration and inspection of premises at which pork is dressed, veterinary examination and certification, standards of cleanliness and standard crates for packing. These measures, if adopted, should further enhance the reputation and, therefore, the relative value of Irish pork on the London market. It is expected that, in time, they will lead to the adoption of standard grades for both weight and quality. If, as a further consequence, a greater regularity in supply could be secured, one of the chief handicaps now experienced would be surmounted.

In spite of Ireland's favourable geographical position, losses are incurred on occasions, owing to delays on the route between Dublin and London and between the rail terminus in London and the Smithfield market. Consignments which reach Smithfield after 6 a.m. miss the day's market.

THE LONDON PROVISION EXCHANGE.

One witness has informed us that he can communicate by telephone with rapidity and certainty with his factories in Denmark and Holland, but finds great difficulty in communicating with his factories in Ireland. These are matters which should receive attention by the Governments concerned.

The share of the Irish Free State in the imports of bacon into Great Britain was only 6.2 per cent. in 1925, 5.3 per cent. in 1927, and 6.3 per cent. in 1928. Irish bacon is chiefly sold in London, the South of England, the Midlands and South Wales.

The best quality Irish Wiltshire-cut side commands a premium on the London Provision Exchange above that of any of its competitors. (English bacon is not quoted on this exchange.) This in itself is a testimony to the favour with which it is regarded by many consumers. The average weekly prices per cwt. of Wiltshire-cut (green) bacon of the best quality on the London Provision Exchange for the years 1924 to 1928 were as follows:—

Irish	112 0	135 0	137 0	112 0	107 0
Danish ...	104 0	122 0	122 0	94 0	98 0
Canadian...	98 0	115 0	117 0	91 0	93 0
Dutch	103 0	115 0	112 0	88 0	90 0
Swedish ..	98 0	118 0	115 0	87 0	92 0

DEPARTMENT'S POLICY.

Although the margins in favour of best Irish are thus pronounced, they fluctuate considerably. During the three years 1926 to 1928 they have been as wide as 35s. a cwt. in February, 1927, and as narrow as 1s. a cwt. in December, 1928. A study of the prices of the last three years indicates a tendency for these margins to widen in the spring and to contract in the autumn. Throughout the latter half of 1928 the margin in favour of best Irish rarely exceeded 2s. a cwt.

In aiming at a high standard of uniformity the Irish Free State trade starts with an initial advantage. Largely as a result of the policy followed for some time by the Department of Agriculture, uniformity in breed already exists to a considerable degree in the Irish Free State. Breeders and feeders have constantly been encouraged by the Department to aim at producing lean meat. The Department has for some time advocated the use of the large white Yorkshire for breeding, and it has persistently discouraged fancy breeds and colours, particularly the soft, short, chubby pig overloaded with fat, which is unsuited alike for the pork and the bacon trade. The Department has also opposed the use of black pigs owing to their tendency to "seedy cut."

IMPROVEMENT SCHEMES.

The methods by which this policy has been put into practical effect have varied. The Department began by introducing a scheme in 1901 for subsidising boars. Premiums were offered to owners of high-class boars of the Large White Yorkshire breed (or Large White Ulsters in the case of one or two counties where the local trade demands this type) on condition that the boars serve at prescribed fees a stated number of sows owned by small farmers and agricultural labourers in the county where the boar is placed. If the boars prove satisfactory and are passed after inspection, the premiums are renewed for a second year. The total number of pedigree boars placed out in 1927 was 1,114, more than double the figure for 1925. The premium boars represent about 50 per cent. of the total number of boars in the Free State.

As a temporary measure from 1925 to 1927, to meet a shortage of sows in poor districts, the Department of Agriculture arranged for the location of a number of young sows of the Large White Yorkshire breed in the congested districts. It is claimed that excellent results were obtained from this scheme since the districts concerned were stocked with pigs of the best type, and we have been informed that the poorest districts in Ireland are now producing the most suitable pigs for the factories.

GROWING HOME CONSUMPTION.

It is probable that the provisions of the Live Stock Breeding Act, 1925, will shortly be applied to boars. Should this action be taken, only boars which have been passed on inspection may be retained for breeding purposes, and there will thus be a more effective control of the type of pigs produced. This will in time make for greater uniformity in the finished product.

In spite of these and other similar efforts, the exports of Irish bacon to the British market have not shown any large increase. This is attributed to the growing consumption of bacon in the Free State itself, brought about partly by the fall in the price of Irish bacon and also to some extent to the persistent efforts of Irish curers to cultivate the home market.

The problem before the Irish bacon industry is very similar to that before the English. Its best brands possess a very high reputation on the English market, second only to the best English. This grade commands a good price, but appeals to a somewhat limited market. Like the English, the Irish bacon is mostly dry-cured. The question arises whether such economies in production, in curing and in marketing can be effected as would put standardised Irish bacon on the market in large regular quantities at prices competitive with the Danish. We believe that only if this can be done will a really large increase in pig production result.

To this end there must be joint action on the part of both sections of the trade—the producers and the curers. The present system by which the farmer is paid the same price per score for bad pigs as for good removes all incentive to the production of a standardised article. In Ireland as in England the crying need is of the archaic system prevailing in many local markets.

The month's gross passenger receipts were £89,894, compared with £72,309 for the corresponding period last year.

The following official returns of regular road motor 'bus services, with gross receipts of £10 and upwards per month, are issued by the Statistics Branch of the Free State Department of Industry and Commerce:—

THIRTY-THIRD FEIS CEOIL.

SATISFACTORY REPORT.

At the annual general meeting of the Feis Ceoil Association, held yesterday at the offices, 37 Molesworth street, Dublin. Mr. J. Hubbard Clark presided.

The report of the Executive Committee for 1928-29 was read by Miss Edith Mortier, the Registrar, from which it appeared that an encouraging feature of this year's festival, which was held during the week from April 29th to May 4th, was the increased interest shown in the wind instrument department. Early in March requests for the revival of the band competition were received. The Committee gladly acceded to these, and five bands entered. These, together with some forty entries in the solo classes constituted a "record" in the wind sections.

Two new competitions, the Esposito Cup, presented by Mr. Frederick Dawson and Sir John Griffith, and the Mrs. P. J. Geoghegan Memorial Cup, presented by the Ladies' Committee, were of special interest, the general standard in the last-named being, perhaps, the highest among the vocal competitions.

The Joseph O'Mara Cup was this year won outright by Mr. Frank Cowle. This cup was presented in 1910 by Mr. Joseph O'Mara, and has for the past twenty years been an interesting and attractive feature of the Feis. The Committee have decided to replace this cup by another of the same design, to be known in future as the Joseph O'Mara Memorial Cup.

The Joseph Sarto Cup for Plainsong again drew a very large entry, and the Committee was fortunate in being able to secure the Round Room at the Mansion House for this competition, and also for the bands.

During the past year the Committee had lost a valued member through the death of Miss Florence Culwick. Miss Culwick always took a keen interest in the work of the Association, and by competing with her choir in earlier years helped to set a high standard in choral singing. Later, as a member of the Musical Committee, she gave willingly much time and thought to the selection of test pieces, and her colleagues will greatly miss her valuable help.

The entries, while not quite reaching the record of 1928, were nevertheless extremely good. The figures in 1928 were 1,055, in 1929, 890.

A CREDIT BALANCE.

The balance sheet showed a credit balance of £157 1s. 7d., and the report says that the attendance was larger than that of last year, an indication that the public interest in the festival continues to increase.

The Committee expressed their thanks to the Ladies' Committee for its enthusiastic work on behalf of the Association, and to the Committee of the Unitarian Church for allowing their organ for the competitions, to the railway companies, and to the Press for the help given.

The Chairman said that one of the outstanding features of the Association was that for thirty-three years they had been able to hold these competitions without a break, even in the troubled period through which they had passed. The value of the competitions and their success had been indicated in the reports of the adjudicators. It was satisfactory also to find that the work of the Association had been a financial success. They were handicapped by the lack of a suitable hall in which to hold the competitions, no less than seven different buildings being requisitioned for this year's work. A few years ago the Association indicated that they would deal handsomely with any body of people who would undertake the erection of a suitable hall in Dublin, but there was no response. He now suggested that the War Memorial Committee, who had a large sum of money at their disposal, should consider a proposal to erect such a building in the city as a fitting war memorial. That Committee might not have as much money as would be required to erect a hall worthy of the cause, but he had no doubt that it would be supplemented to the necessary extent by the public.

The administrative work of the Association was practically voluntary, and to those enthusiastic workers he had no hesitation in saying that they had reason to be satisfied with their success. They had accomplished a great deal for the cause of musical culture not only in Dublin, but in all Ireland. He hoped that the work would continue to prosper, and that the citizens would give those ladies and gentlemen the support that their voluntary efforts richly deserved.

Mr. J. R. Coade, moving the adoption of the report, recalled that thirty-three years ago, he was one of a small group who had the audacity to enter for competition in the first year. He did it just to make entries and without any hope of gaining a prize. The work went on, and now there were local feiseanna all over the country, much to the improvement of musical culture.

Mr. C. P. Curran seconded, and the report was adopted.

On the motion of Dr. Denham, seconded by Mrs. Starkie, the honorary treasurers—Captain M. M. Fitzgibbon and Mr. J. E. Geoghegan—were re-elected. Miss A. B. Griffith was re-elected honorary secretary, and Captain T. M. Gerrard as honorary solicitor.

On the motion of Miss Boxwell, seconded by Mrs. Kelly, Mr. E. P. Griffith and Mr. G. V. Mortier were re-elected scrutineers.

DUBLIN GRAMAPHONE RECITAL.

Before a very large audience, a gramaphone recital under the auspices of the Christian Brothers' Past Pupils' Union, was given in the Ierne Hall, Dublin, last night. The programme included selections of popular music, which were played with remarkable effect on electrically-driven gramaphones. Mr. T. O'Reilly, who was the conductor, considerably added to the interest of the recital by his explanatory remarks on the compositions recorded, and on the composers and performers. The selections included an excerpt from "Carmen," played by the Berlin State Orchestra, the vocalist being Peter Dawson; Schubert's "March Militaire," played by the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra; "Panis Angelicus," and an excerpt from "Lilac Time" (Schubert), sung by John McCormack, and a song by Harry Lauder. There were several selections from operas given, as well as popular songs and dance music.

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF WOMEN.

PROPOSED RENT REBATES FOR POOR PARENTS.

That poor persons should be given a rebate on the rent of municipal houses was the proposal contained in a resolution carried at the concluding session of the annual Conference of the National Council of Women at Manchester yesterday. The rebates, it was agreed, should be graduated according to family income, and the number of dependent children.

Miss Marion Fitzgerald, of the Manchester, Salford and District Branch of the National Council of Women, submitted the resolution. She contended that such an allowance was the only way to bring the rents of municipal houses within the reach of families living in the slums. "The new post-war housing schemes," she said, "have not relieved the slums, because the rents are far too high for the people whom they are intended to assist."

The conference was asked to urge the Government to give facilities for the passing of the Poor Persons Defence Bill, introduced by Sir John Withers.

After a long discussion the whole matter was referred to a committee.

At the afternoon session Dr. Leticia Fairfield spoke on "Recent developments in child guidance," and Mrs. William Fyfe, of Glasgow, dealt with "The influence of the cinema."

THE PHARMACEUTICAL SOCIETY OF IRELAND.

NEW REGISTRAR ELECTED.

The election of the president and other officers of the Pharmaceutical Society of Ireland for the coming year took place at the October meeting of the Council, held at 67 Lower Mount street, Dublin, under the presidency of Mr. F. J. Fitzpatrick, President of the Society. Mr. Fitzpatrick (Dublin) was elected President for a fourth term of office, and Mr. Denis J. Nugent (Dublin) was elected Vice-President, also for a fourth term.

The President welcomed to the Council Mr. Timothy Costello, of Dublin, who had been elected at the annual meeting.

The Vice-President, in proposing the re-election of Mr. Fitzpatrick as President of the Society, said that no man could possibly give better service than he had given, and he felt that the Council, in re-electing him as President, would be simply conferring on him on honour which he deserved.

Mr. P. J. Fielding (Cork), in seconding the proposition, said that they were lucky in having two such excellent officers as Mr. Fitzpatrick and Mr. Nugent.

Sir Thomas Robinson, in supporting the re-election of Mr. Fitzpatrick, said that he did not know in his experience of any man on whom such an honour had been more wisely or more worthily conferred than on Mr. Fitzpatrick. All of them had seen personally the immense amount of work that Mr. Fitzpatrick had done, and he could not recall any man who had conferred so much benefit on the Council by his individual and personal work as Mr. Fitzpatrick.

Mr. Fitzpatrick was unanimously re-elected.

The President, in returning thanks, said that he appreciated the very high compliment they had paid him. All that he could promise was to endeavour to work in the future as he had done in the past.

The President, in moving the re-election of Mr. Nugent as Vice-President for the coming year, said that if it had not been for Mr. Nugent's pressure on him he would not have consented to stand again as President. He had pleasure in moving that their very able Vice-President be re-elected for the coming year.

Mr. Brooke Kelly, in seconding the motion, spoke of the admirable work done by Mr. Nugent in the cause of pharmacy during the past year and during the years that he had filled the office of Vice-President.

The Vice-President was unanimously re-elected. In returning thanks, he said that he was exceedingly grateful to the President for his kind remarks He thought that they had done their best in the past, and he could assure them that they would do their very best in the future.

Mr. J. J. Roche (Dublin) proposed, and Mr. Joseph Corry (Naas) seconded, the re-election of Dr. Michael Ryan (Dublin) as Honorary Treasurer. The motion was passed unanimously. Dr. Ryan returned thanks.

On the motion of Mr. P. D. Larkin (Drogheda), seconded by Mr. D. Warwick (Dublin) Mr. R. J. Kidney, F.S.A.A. (Dublin) was unanimously re-elected Auditor.

Mr. James J. Kerr, M.P.S.I., of Clones, was appointed Registrar to the Society, to take up office on the 1st November, 1929.

The President, referring to the circumstances necessitating the change, spoke of the importance of having as Registrar to the Society a Pharmaceutical Chemist, in view of the coming pharmacy legislation.

The Council, in recognition of the services of Miss E. C. Grene (Dublin) as temporary Registrar for the past three and a half years, voted her a gratuity of £100.

Four candidates, who forwarded certificates from other bodies, were admitted to preliminary registration.

Eight Licentiates were elected to membership of the Society, and three were nominated for membership.

Mr. James J. Kerr, M.P.S.I., the recently appointed Registrar, was a member of the Special Committee which prepared proposals for the consideration of the Government in connection with the coming pharmacy legislation in the Free State. He is a brother of the well-known Ulster playwright, "C. K. Ayre."

U.S. MARKETS.

STOCKS STRONG.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.
NEW YORK, Thursday.

The Stock Market opened weak. Sharp recoveries occurred, with Utilities prominent, after early heaviness, during which several leaders were hammered down 1 to 5 points, some of the early selling representing liquidation of weakened marginal accounts. Short covering played an important part in the rally, which ranged from 1 to 5 points in the most active issues, and 6 to 19 points in a few specialities. The lowering of the call money rate from 7 to 6 per cent. was coincidental with the passing of mid-month demands, and stimulated a recovery; but some nervousness was occasionally apparent as regards the weekly brokers' loans statement. The final dealings witnessed sharp advances under the leadership of U.S. Steel, while Standard Oil of New Jersey was heavily bought. Air Reduction advanced 19 points, Auburn Motors 16, and Detroit, Edison, American Tobacco, Columbia Gas, A. M. Byers, Eastman Kodak, North American, Western Union Telegraph, Westinghouse Electric, St. Joseph's Lead, American and Foreign Power, Simmons Co., Industrial Alcohol, Central of New Jersey, Atchison, Topeka, New York Consolidated Gas, Sears Roebuck, Timken Roller Bearing and Columbia Carbon 2 to 4. Brooklyn Union Gas declined 4 points, and International Combustion, on which the dividend was omitted, 5 points. The market closed strong. Government Bonds quiet; Railroad Bonds steady. The day's sales totalled 3,857,000 shares.

NEW YORK COTTON.

COTTON opened steady, 2 points lower to unchanged. Continued Southern hedge selling and liquidation on favourable weather reports and large receipts caused early recessions. The trade bought on the scale down, but there was little outside interest, and general selling developed. Finally short covering brought rallies, the market closing steady, although 27 to 12 points down. Spot quiet at 25 points decline. At New Orleans futures opened unchanged to 3 points lower. Around 11.45 October was quoted 17.74, December 17.92, January 18.02, March 18.30, and May 18.56; while at 1.45 December weakened to 17.79, January to 17.90, March 18.18, and May 18.46. Values closed 18 to 14 points down. Spot declined 14 points.

Spot, middling upland at New York, 18.00.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Thursday.

WHEAT was easy at the opening, and 1⅛c. to ⅜c. down on a reported increase in stocks at Kansas City and Minneapolis, together with an easier cash market and renewed commission house liquidation. The market rallied afterwards on a bullish Clement Curtis cable stating that the crop condition in Cordoba was poor. A private estimate indicating the Argentine yield at 165,000,000 bushels was a further factor, and the market closed steady, ¼c. lower to unchanged.

THE PRICE OF PROGRESS.

OPENING ADDRESS TO ELECTRICAL ENGINEERS.

The price of progress as represented by the risks of the present mechanised age formed the subject of the opening address of Mr. T. J. Monaghan, B.Sc., M.I.M.E., Chairman of the Irish Centre of the Institution of Electrical Engineers at a meeting held in the Physical Laboratory, Trinity College, Dublin, last night.

Mr. Laurence J. Kettle, City Electrical Engineer, occupied the chair, and there was a large attendance.

Mr. Monaghan pointed out first that the benefits of the scientific era, such as improved methods in medicine and surgery, transport by air, land and sea, communications by wire and wireless are all really concerned with loosening the fetters of space and time. Our expectation of life, he said, is more than a decade greater than that of our grandfathers; we have rapid means of travel at our disposal and can communicate quickly with our brethren wherever they may be. These advantages have been won for us by the efforts of those who have spent time, money and hope in the search for knowledge, and have been prepared to risk, if need be, life itself in their efforts to wrest her secrets from nature.

RISK TO LIFE.

The practical application of these advances in knowledge introduce an element of risk to life. In a dim sort of way the public recognise the dangers of modern life, but are prepared to leave the fixing of standards of risk to their expert advisers. But it does happen at times that the public rises up and demands that risk rates be lowered—thus at the moment there is a practically world-wide movement for the reduction of the very heavy accident rates due to motor vehicles.

Examination of official figures showed, he continued, that in Great Britain, Canada and the United States motor vehicles were responsible for more fatal accidents than any other cause, and the rates were rising. Falls were second in importance as the cause of fatal accidents, and in Great Britain one was more likely to die from falling downstairs than in a railway accident.

FALLING OUT OF BED.

Turning to electrical accidents, the speaker pointed out that in England falls out of bed caused more fatalities than did electricity, and that mishaps at cricket and football were responsible for about half as many deaths as electrical accidents. On the average, year in, year out, excessive heat and excessive cold each claimed more victims than electricity in Great Britain.

The rate of electrical risk varied widely in different countries, typical figures per 100,000 of the population being .1 in Great Britain, .2 in Holland, .4 in Canada and 1.0 in the United States. The risk rate depended probably upon two main factors: first, the mental outlook of the people, the extent to which they were prepared to live dangerously; and, secondly, the amount of electricity used per head of the population. Risk did not increase in direct ratio to the consumption of electricity. Thus, Canada used more electricity per head than the United States, and yet had only forty per cent. of the risk rate. Holland used less electricty per head than Great Britain and had twice the risk rate.

Since increased risk meant in general cheaper methods of construction, and thus the possibility of affording the amenities of electricity to an increased number of users, electrical engineers had a difficult duty to perform in trying to strike the happy mean between cost and hazard.

On the motion of Mr. M. J. Buckley, President of the Institute of Civil Engineers, seconded by Mr. Whysall, electrical engineer, Belfast, a vote of thanks was passed to Mr. Monaghan.

DISTRICT NURSING IN CORK.

ASSOCIATION'S VALUABLE WORK.

FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.
CORK, Thursday.

An all important work is carried on without ostentation among the Protestant poor of the City of Cork by the Cork District Nursing Association, in whose aid a successful sale of work was held at the Y.M.C.A. Buildings here to-day.

The opening ceremony was performed by Lady Charlotte Smith Barry, who expressed her gratification at being able to help in the great and inspiring work carried on by the members of the Association. That this work was conducted among the very poor of the city, who were unable to pay for the nursing attention that they so badly needed, made the object of that sale all the more desirable.

No payment is enforced from these people, she added, but those who could do so very willingly paid whatever amount they could spare. The result was, however, that the Association was very largely dependent on that sale of work as its source of income, together with some donations and subscriptions from the members and a small allowance from the Irish Peasantry Society. She hoped, therefore, that as their work was voluntary the effort to augment their funds would be crowned with success, and, in formally declaring the sale open, she paid eloquent tribute to the work of their district nurse, Miss Baxter, and the hon. secretary, Mrs. McConnell.

BLENHEIM BEATEN.

GAME PERFORMANCE OF FAIR ISLE.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT

NEWMARKET, Thursday Night.

If fields were small in some of the best races this afternoon, and if the crowd was only a fraction of that which came yesterday to see the Cesarewitch, the racing was exceptionally good and interesting, especially the two-year-old events. The outstanding performance of the afternoon was that of Lord Derby's filly, Fair Isle, who, in the Bretby Stakes, beat Lord Woolavington's Fair Diana by a length and a half, as I fully expected she would do.

Fred Darling had immense confidence in his filly, who had beaten Blenheim in the Champagne Stakes at Doncaster, but she was no match whatever for the daughter of Phalaris, who is a full sister to Pharos and Fairway, and no unworthy one either. Fair Diana beat her out of the gate, and held a slight advantage of her until they were coming down Bushes hill. Then she went right away from the Hurry On filly, the third runner, Torchere, not being able to sustain the pace for more than three furlongs.

HER ONLY FAULT.

The only possible fault that can be found with Fair Isle is that she is small, but she stands over a lot of ground, and there is a lot of scope about her. There have been many good two-year-olds in the Stanley House stable in recent years, and it may be mentioned that few of them have been able to do what Fair Isle has accomplished with others in the yard. There is no doubt whatever about her being the best first season filly we have seen this year, and one might even go further, and suggest that she is the best two-year-old of either sex that has been produced to date.

I thought highly of Blenheim after he had won at the last meeting here, but in the Middle Park Stakes this afternoon he was well beaten by Lord Woolavington's Press Gang, who finished half a length in front of him, and was outstriding him all the way. One must pay tribute to the courageous way that Blenheim fought it out. He tried his hardest not to be denied, and pulled out the last ounce, but the other colt was always too good for him.

A FIELD OF FOUR.

There were only four runners, and the French filly, Fata Morgana, never had any sort of chance, Press Gang's stable companion, Lovat Scout, finishing third, three lengths behind Blenheim. In the New Stakes at Ascot Blenheim had beaten Press Gang by two lengths, but the Beckhampton colt took an ample revenge on him to-day. At the moment Press Gang is a very smart colt. He is by Hurry On out of Fifinella, who has yet to produce anything nearly as good as herself.

I can remember a full brother of his, Messenger Boy, who was a really bad horse, with the worst of legs, and became a confirmed roarer early in his three-year-old days. Press Gang, it may be mentioned, is not in the Derby, but is in the Two Thousand Guineas. One would like to know how he stands with Challenger, a winner early in the week, for the latter, I think, is an exceptionally good colt.

There was another interesting two-year-old winner during the day in Captain King, a gelded son of King Sol, owned by Mrs. B. C. Fairfax and trained in Yorkshire by Bellerby, who produced that objectionable animal, King of Clubs, to win the Lincolnshire from Zionist and rob the public of much good money.

CAPTAIN KING WINS.

Bellerby seldom comes as far South as Newmarket with his horses, and Captain King, who has won his last three races in the North, was carrying a 10lb. penalty in the Suffolk Nursery Handicap. Childs rode him, and he worked him along steadily to catch Lady Abbess and beat her by a head, a distance which would have been increased had there been any further to go. They seem uncommonly well off for good two-year-olds in the North this season, and Peacock believes he has a smasher in Old Friend.

The day began with the Witchford Three-Year-Old Selling Plate, which Café au Lait, a gelding by Soldennis out of the dam of Dark Warrior, won in a canter from the uncertain Tyrano.

The Challenge Stakes was robbed of much of its interest by the defection of such as Royal Minstrel, Songe, Delius and Caraquette, and reduced itself to a field of three—Reedsmouth, on whom a shade of odds were laid; Costaki Pasha, and Trincomalee, the outsider of the party, who was staying on better than anything, and was only beaten a head and a short head by Reedsmouth and Costaki Pasha.

REEDSMOUTH SETS THE PACE.

Reedsmouth made all the running, and, although Costaki Pasha may have drawn level, I doubt whether he ever got his head in front. The two colts were in the first four in the Free Handicap last season, and Trincomalee was rated as the third-best filly below Tiffin and Arabella. None of them except, perhaps, Trincomalee seems to be able to get more than six furlongs now, but Reedsmouth may prove himself a good sprinter in handicaps next year.

Lord Rosebery put Gordon Richards up on his Spion Kop colt, San Marino, in the Heath Plate, and, keeping him away out by himself on the far side of the course, he made all the running, and won cantering by three lengths from Wirework, the French horse, Pedant II., filling third place.

The weakest spot in the day's racing was the Lowther Stakes, a match between Fox on Totalisator and Richards on Alight, which the former won easily.

FOX'S DOUBLE.

Fox, who rode Press Gang, had two winners during the day, and Richards had one, so that his present lead over the other is three. Richards is a little handicapped by having to ride the many moderate horses which Lord Glanely owns.

This owner is having a wholesale weed-out, and, instead of having, as at present, between seventy and eighty horses in the yard, he will have only a few over forty next season. These will consist of twenty who are now two-year-olds, eighteen yearlings who are coming up, and a few older horses. It has been stated that Captain Hogg would train a number of jumpers for Lord Glanely this winter, but actually he will have only a couple who are being schooled over hurdles. The other horses which Lord Glanely may run over hurdles will be trained by Sam Bennet, a brother of the late Captain Bennet, who won the Grand National on Sergeant Murphy and has a stable at Seaford, on the Sussex coast.

SELECTIONS.

To-morrow's racing will not be as interesting as on the preceding days. The Prendergast Stakes, for two-year-olds, may be the best event, and here I suggest that Lieutenant-Colonel Loder's colt CHRISTOPHER ROBIN will be too good for Diocletian, Hakem and Tiffin's half-brother Golden Dawn.

THE MACNAB, who is a much fancied horse for the Cambridgeshire, should win the Royal Stakes, and TOMMY ATKINS look good in the Exning Welter.

At Catterick Bridge, ALDESSAN, a smart youngster trained by Peacock, may win the Hartforth Nursery; while CARAFE may take the Bedale Handicap.

GOWRAN PARK.

CLOSE FINISHES.

A POPULAR OUTSIDER'S SUCCESS.

Gowran Park well upheld its reputation for providing good racing when the autumn fixture was brought off yesterday. The crowd, which was principally composed of County Kilkenny and County Waterford people, was fairly satisfactory; but, owing to lack of suitable train facilities, very few made the journey from Dublin. It was a delightful autumn afternoon, and the picturesque course looked its very best.

Mr. J. Kirwan, whose stable is not far from the course, usually captures a couple of races at the meeting, and on this occasion he did not go away empty-handed. His first success was with Woodstown in the Clara hurdle race. Beech Dale, the mount of Mr. Fred. Clarke, looked to have the race won at the last hurdle, but, swerving close home, he was caught and beaten by Woodstown, the mount of D. Kirwan, the verdict being a neck.

Strangely enough, Mr. Clarke and D. Kirwan were also concerned in another close finish for the Kilkenny Plate, but on this occasion the neck verdict went in favour of the amateur rider. Betty R., the property of an American visitor, Mr. T. F. Russell, has been running consistently throughout the season, seldom failing to finish in the first three, and now, ridden in judicious style by Mr. Clarke, she defeated Good Thing in a fine finish by the margin stated.

Not for a long time has there been such an enthusiastic ovation accorded to a winner at an Irish country meeting as was the case when the outsider, Kilbronan Lass, won the Grange Steeplechase. There were four runners for this, and none of the riders appeared to want to make the running, until suddenly Kilbronan Lass slipped away and established such a long lead as to make her defeat an impossible achievement, except she came to grief. Acting Master and Odd Cat in the attempt to overhaul her fell, and Let Me Go, the only other survivor, though making up a good deal of leeway, failed to get on terms. It was a remarkable race, and the popularity of the owner and trainer was made manifest by the cheering which greeted the victory.

J. Kirwan's stable gained a second success when Silent Service beat a field of six others in the Autumn Plate. Dreamy Knight, the favourite for this race, made a very poor showing, as did Prince Principle, but Border Knight was running on well at the finish, and should do better over a longer journey.

The two miles steeplechase was won in good style by the top weight, Sky Fruit, and the Committee Plate by Thorny Way, who came on to the meeting after running at Mallow on the previous day. Details:—

Silver Ore was fourth.

3.0—THE GRANGE PLATE of 40 sovs. A handicap steeplechase. 3 m.

Ronald's Pride set the pace to Prince Principle, Silent Service, Lark Lass and Border Knight, with Supplication and Dreamy Knight last, until a quarter of a mile from home, when Silent Service was in front of Lark Lass and Border Knight. Close home Border Knight took second place, but could make no impression on Silent Service, who won by three lengths; four lengths between second and third. Prince Principle was fourth, Supplication fifth, and Dreamy Knight next.

4.0—THE STEWARDS' PLATE of 40 sovs. A handicap steeplechase. 2 m.

Mr. J. H. de Bromhead's b. h. SKY FRUIT, by Sky-rocket—Nectarine, 5, 12-4 Mr. H. J. Delmege 1

Betting—6 to 4 agst. Little Eva's Rose, 2 to 1 THORNY WAY, 3 to 1 Ernest, 7 to 1 Coolebar, 50 to 1 Barrackton Boy.

Coolebar led from Ernest, Little Eva's Rose, Thorny Way and Barrackton Boy for a mile, when Ernest drew to the front, followed by Coolebar, Thorny Way and Little Eva's Rose. Close home, Thorny Way took command and won by two lengths; eight lengths divided second and third. Little Eva's Rose was fourth.

Two-year-olds and the Hard Going.

At a meeting of the Jockey Club at Newmarket, on Wednesday, Sir George Bullough said that the Stewards of the Jockey Club intended to make suggestions to Clerks of Courses to include some maiden three-year-old races in their spring programmes next year. Owing to the hard ground a great many two-year-olds had not been able to run this autumn, and the Stewards believe that owners would welcome the opportunity of running their maiden three-year-olds in the early part of next season. This had the unanimous approval of the members present.

NEWMARKET TO-DAY: PROBABLE STARTERS AND BETTING

THE MACNAB'S CHANCE.

SELECTIONS.

Interesting racing will be provided at the final stage of the Second October fixture at Newmarket, where the Prendergast Stakes for two-year-olds and the Royal Stakes for three-year-olds figure as the main attractions. Unfortunately, there will not be many competitors for the Royal Stakes, but, with Modder, The Macnab, Nijinski and Osiris due to be saddled, the issue is open in character. It seems probable that the Beckhampton colt, The Macnab, will be a good favourite, as he has won his last two races, the Britannia Handicap at Ascot and the Robert de Witville Handicap at Sandown, and is running here as part of his preparation for the Cambridgeshire. Nijinski has failed to win a race this season, and Modder appears to have too much weight. Osiris is fairly useful, but cannot be expected to beat The Macnab at level weights, and the Beckhampton colt should win.

Lord D'Abernon's Diocletian is expected to put up a good show in the Prendergast Stakes, even under 9st. 7lb. He is a very speedy colt, and his recent success in the Ashley Plate at Lewes and the Palatine Nursery at Manchester indicate that he should be able to show to advantage in the best sprinting company. There is a good chance here for the Whatcombe colt, Hakem, on the form he showed when successful in the Prince of Wales's Plate and the Malton Plate at York, but more emphatic information is to hand concerning Golden Dawn, who has had only one outing in public, when unplaced in the Windsor Castle Stakes at Ascot. Christopher Robin and Eyes Front may be the best of the remainder, but in choosing between Hakem and Golden Dawn I prefer the proved public form of Hakem.

If Lord Derby's filly, Pladda, is saddled for the Kennett Stakes, she will be a general fancy, as she will be racing over her best distance, and is now at her best. If she is absent, the race should be within the compass of Thomas a Tattamus.

The Exning Welter Handicap should be fought out by Tommy Atkins, Queen Scotia and Golden Oracle. On the form shown by Tommy Atkins when winning the Ayr Gold Cup from a field of seventeen I think that he holds an undeniable chance here, although the three-year-old Queen Scotia should give him a good race.

NEWMARKET SALES.

14,880 GUINEAS FOR 43 LOTS.

Horses in training provided the main interest in yesterday morning's sales at the park paddocks, Newmarket, as the few yearlings on offer were of a moderate sample, and did not change hands at low reserves. Lord Dewar was first in the field with eleven horses from F. Darling's and D. Pickering's stables, and, except that Golden Chalice was reserved at 1,050 guineas, a clearance was effected, Mr. Clarence Hailey, who buys for export, securing Marconigram at 820 guineas, and Mr. C. C. Horne, The Black Abbot for 1,000 guineas. The Phalaris colt, Dupplin, who cost 7,000 guineas as a yearling, was parted with at the trifle of 100 guineas to the B.B.A.

Captain F. Forester's four-year-old, Letterfrack, at 620 guineas, was another of the B.B.A. purchases; while Capt. Herbert Musker took Advocate from Mr. J. Hart's consignment at 710 guineas.

The Duke of Portland sold four of his five lots for 2,980 guineas, Leonard and Silex Major being knocked down at 1,800 and 800 guineas to J. McGuigan. They were bought on behalf of Mr. H. F. Clayton, and return to Capt. Elsey's stable to be trained.

The King's filly, Colleen, own sister to Paddy, made 620 guineas to Capt. Burns Hartopp, and the six-year-old, Ballynahinch, was disposed of at 480 guineas to Mr. Joseph Staien, the well-known exhibitor of premium stallions.

The highest price among the last twenty lots was 510 guineas, given by Mr. C. J. Phillips for the three-year-old, Uncle Dick, in Mr. C. E. Howard's contingent.

The principal withdrawals, apart from Golden Chalice, were Mr. F. W. Horlock's Dandie Dinmont (1,250 guineas), Smoky Light (1,200 guineas), the Duke of Portland's Black Ensign (1,350 guineas), and Mr. Douglas Pennant's Adherent (600 guineas). The aggregate for the morning was 14,880 guineas for 43 lots.

JOCKEY CLUB.

LORD ASTOR AND SIR ABE BAILEY ELECTED MEMBERS.

Lord Astor and Sir Abe Bailey were elected members of the Jockey Club at a meeting of the Club held at Newmarket yesterday.

Lord Astor has been a patron of racing for nearly thirty years, and founded one of the most successful studs in the country by the purchase of three mares—Conjure, Popinjay and Maid of the Mist. All Lord Astor's present bloodstock are descended from these three mares. When he first began owning racehorses he trained with W. Waugh at Kingsclere, but latterly his horses have been at Manton under the care of Alec Taylor, and more recently of Joseph Lawson, and under the management of Mr. Gerald Deane a partner in the famous firm of Tattersalls.

Lord Astor takes an absorbing personal interest in his stud at Cliveden, which is one of the most perfectly equipped in the world. Although he has carried off several of the richest prizes which are put up for competition, he has been singularly unfortunate in the Derby, having regard to the efforts he has made to win the world's biggest classic. His horses have, however, been second in the Derby on five occasions. He has won the Oaks five times, the Eclipse Stakes on four occasions, and has also been successful in the Two Thousand Guineas, the One Thousand Guineas and the St. Leger.

Sir Abe Bailey has been racing in England for some thirty five years, and, although he sold off all his horses in training, yearlings, brood mares and foals last year on account of ill-health, he resumed racing again this season, and is rapidly building up a useful string of horses.

Possibly the best horse he has owned so far has been Son-in-Law, winner of the Goodwood Cup, the Cesarewitch and the Jockey Club Cup, and subsequently a most successful stallion. Although he has met with little luck in the classics he has won most of the important races. Names which come readily to mind are Bucks, winner of the Goodwood Cup; Bucks Hussar, successful in the Alexandra Stakes at Ascot; Dark Ronald, a Royal Hunt Cup winner; Brown Prince, winner of the Cambridgeshire, and Lex, who won a Gimcrack Stakes.

The Racing Calendar says that after the Wincanton Handicap Hurdle Race on October 12th A. Escott reported G. Goswell on the ground of foul riding. The Stewards, having heard the evidence of three jockeys, cautioned Goswell as to his future riding.

After the race for the Kilkenny Plate at Gowran Park yesterday the Stewards, having called upon T. McNeill, the rider of Nugget Lady, to explain why his mount ran out of the course, severely cautioned him as to his future riding.

NEXT GENERAL ELECTION.

FIANNA FAIL'S HOPES.

MR. DE VALERA AND UNEMPLOYMENT.

Mr. de Valera, addressing the fourth annual Ard Feis of Fianna Fail, in the Mansion House, Dublin, yesterday, referred to the unemployment problem. He said that it was admitted that the unemployment statistics in the Free State and in the Six Counties were incomplete. With few exceptions, only persons entitled to unemployment benefit registered at the Employment Exchanges. In spite of these exceptions, the average number of unemployed registered in the Free State during the last twelve months was 26,231, and the number registered in the Six Counties last August was 34,368. Allowing for those who are not registered, and taking into account the higher proportion of insured persons in the Six Counties, there must be in each of the two portions of the country at least 50,000 persons out of work; that is, 100,000 in all.

Even the estimate of 100,000 did not give a complete picture of the situation. Between the census of 1911 and that of 1926 Ireland lost by emigration 512,600 of its people. Since the census of 1926, to countries outside Europe alone a further 125,000 had emigrated. In eighteen years, therefore, 637,000 persons at the maximum of their productive power have had to leave the twenty-six counties in search of a livelihood. That figure must be taken into account if they were to come to any proper realisation of the extent of unemployment and what failure to effect a solution means to the nation. There was far too little public appreciation of the sufferings unemployment caused to the unemployed and their families, and of the loss that it was to the whole community.

THE PRODUCTION OF WEALTH.

The 100,000 persons unemployed in Ireland, if distributed between agricultural and manufacturing occupations in the same proportions as the present working population, were capable of producing wealth to the amount of about £11,250,000 a year if they took the output per person at the averages shown by the Free State census of production for industries and agriculture in 1926. Similarly, the 125,000 emigrants who left since the Census of 1926 would be capable of producing wealth annually to the amount of £14,000,000, or, say, a surplus over the cost of their own maintenance of £6,500,000 a year. Thus, ignoring emigration before 1926, they found that unemployment meant a gross loss to Ireland of £17,750,000 a year. Even this enormous sum was far from indicating the full amount that they were losing by unemployment; but it showed that, from a cold economic viewpoint, as well as from that of justice and humanity, the unemployment problem was eminently worth solving.

The cure was available. They had still a very considerable home market both for agricultural and manufacturing products. If they were prepared to protect the home market for all commodities which could be produced economically at home, and to provide adequate capital and efficient organisation for their industries, the unemployment problem could be solved.

Dealing with the administrative side, he said that they believed that a council of economic experts, possessing not merely the power to recommend protective duties, but also charged with the functions which had been unwisely withheld from the Tariff Commission, was needed—a council which in the economic struggle would serve as a headquarters staff serves it in war. It needed something more than the spare time, fitful labour of a trio of civil servants to direct its development. Their unemployment, he submitted, was the result not of resources, but of defective policy and inefficient organisation.

INCREASING HOME PRODUCTS.

He calculated that over £34,000,000 worth of the imports of the Free State could be produced at home, or substituted by home products, merely by a development of existing industries. The raw materials for some of these products would still require to be imported, but the net reduction in imports would be more than enough to convert the trade deficit into a favourable balance. The resulting increase in factory employment, calculated at existing rates of output, would be over 90,000 persons, or nearly twice our estimate of the number at present out of work in the Free State. In addition, there would be considerable increases in the numbers employed in grain and fruit growing, in the raising of raw materials, and in transport and other services. The more he considered the position the more convinced he became that the problem of unemployment in Ireland was quite capable of solution, and the more certain he felt that it was a crime against the unemployed and against the nation to leave it unsolved. (Applause.)

THE ATTENDANCE.

Mr. S. T. O'Kelly, T.D., presided, and there was a full attendance of delegates, who gave Mr. De Valera a very hearty reception on his arrival.

Amongst the delegates were:—Senator Col. Moore, Senator Comyn, K.C., and Senator S. Robinson; Messrs. A. Fogarty, T.D.; J. Jordon, T.D.; T. Carty, T.D.; M. Kilroy, T.D.; S. Goulding, T.D.; R. Briscoe, T.D.; S. Moore, T.D.; S. Brady, T.D.; J. McEntee, T.D.; P. Smith, T.D.; M. Killalea, T.D.; T. Sheehy, T.D.; N. Blaney, T.D.; E. Cooney, T.D.; J. Kennedy, T.D.; F. Carney, T.D.; F. Fahy, T.D.; T. Derrig, T.D.; Dr. J. Ryan, T.D.; D. Buckley, T.D.; E. Donnelly, P. O'Maille, and S. Lemass, T.D.

There were a number of priests amongst the delegates.

THE FIANNA FAIL VOTE.

Moving the adoption of the Hon. Secretary's report, Mr. Lemass, T.D., referred to the increase in the Fianna Fail vote in the two bye-elections which took place during the year, in Sligo-Leitrim and North Dublin, and said that if support for Fianna Fail had similarly increased in other constituencies the party would secure a majority at the next general election. Deputies should not, however, think that the only thing that they had to do was to sit back and wait until victory came along. The results achieved in the past year were only achieved after very hard work, and if they wanted to hold the position which they had secured, and to improve it, a continuation of that hard work was necessary.

The objects of Fianna Fail would not be realised when they secured a majority. Their first duty was to establish a republican form of government in this country in their time. A victory at the polls would be only the first step in achieving that aim. The most difficult and most strenuous part of their work would arise after that victory.

ATTENDANCE IN THE DAIL.

In the discussion which following the attendance of Fianna Fail members at the divisions in the Dail, and their failure to take advantage of opportunities offered was criticised at considerable length by delegates.

Mr. Hogan (Dublin) said he had seen no answer to the charge made by Mr. J. T. O'Connell, leader of the Labour Party, that had the Fianna Fail deputies been present, the Government would have been overthown on several divisions during the last session.

Another delegate said that the bad attendance in the Dail of some members during the year was directly responsible for the decrease in the number of cumainn (clubs) in certain areas. On the morning on which the leader of the party was suspended from the Dail half of the Fianna Fail deputies were absent.

A female delegate from Rathmines declared that the people were disgusted and disheartened at the manner in which deputies had absented themselves from the Dail, and were saying that such deputies were only job-hunters, who would not do an honest day's work. They were dishonest in that they were drawing money for which they gave no service, and it was time that it was stopped.

REASONS FOR ABSENCE.

Mr. M. J. Kennedy, T.D., speaking as one of those deputies who had been reported for absence from the Dail without leave, said that when he went down to the Westmeath County Council and put an end to the victimisation of Republican road-workers, he did ten times more for the nation than if he had been present in the Dail. Other deputies were absent by reason of the fact that they were carrying the Republican banner, and were also doing good work for the country. Delegates should remember that this time twelve months the fifty-seven T.D.'s of Fianna Fail collected £105,000 for the new paper, and were absent from the Dail on many occasions for that purpose. No Fianna Fail member deliberately absented himself from the Dail

Rev. Father Kelly, P.P. (Spiddal), said that it was the first duty of their T.D.'s to be present in the Dail when it was sitting. By absenting themselves T.D.'s were creating the impression throughout the country that the party did not want "to get there," but was content with just "hanging-on."

"THE CREST OF THE WAVE."

Mr. Lemass, replying, said that it was sheer nonsense for anyone to say that the decline in the organisation was due to the fact that certain deputies could have done more work. In County Dublin, for instance, there was a very substantial decline in the number of cumainn, and yet the two deputies representing that area had the best record for attendance in the Dail. The organisation was not declining: they were going forward on the crest of the wave; and there never was, since 1921, such a decided movement in their favour as took place last year.

Mr. Fallon (North Dublin) moved that the report be referred back, with a view to getting an explanation from the deputies whose attendance had not been satisfactory.

Mr. G. Boland, T.D. (Roscommon), pointed out that Dail members had to attend local Councils, and the party would have to decide whether they should allow T.D.'s to go forward as candidates at elections to these local bodies in future. It was quite wrong to think that the Government could be defeated on a snap division. They could not, and the party had come to the conclusion that they could not be defeated in the Dail at present, because the Government could always put forward a "no confidence" motion. There were in the party no more than five members who were unsatisfactory in their attendances, but there was no great complaint against other members of the party.

The motion to refer back was defeated, and the report was adopted.

THE ELECTIONS.

The following officers were unanimously re-elected:—

President—Mr. E. de Valera, T.D.

Vice-Presidents—Messrs. S. T. O'Kelly, T.D., and P. J. Ruttledge, T.D.

Honorary Secretaries—Messrs. S. Lemass, T.D., and G. Boland, T.D.

THE PROFESSIONAL POLITICIAN.

Mr. de Valera, referring to the attendance of members at the divisions, said that in that particular matter they could not be absolutely rigid unless they were prepared to face the alternative of having a party which would be composed entirely of what he might call professional politicians. If the proposition was put forward that their T.D.'s were not to be members of public bodies, he believed that the Ard Feis, like the party itself, would be divided. While they should see to it that their representatives carried out their duties in the Dail, they should be slow to criticise without full knowledge of the facts.

Replying to the suggestion that too much attention was being paid to the question of land annuities, he said that the money that was being sent out of Ireland every year was sufficient to finance completely an enterprise as large as the Shannon Scheme yearly. That would show them that their policy with regard to the annuities was justified. Further justification for it was to be found in the attitude of misrepresentation taken up by the Press and by persons in influential positions in regard to Fianna Fail's policy. It was being represented as a policy of trying to default in just obligations. That was not their policy. Their programme in this respect had been already defined on numerous occasions.

The resolutions forwarded by various Cumann in the country were then considered.

THE PROVISION OF WORK.

Mr. Lemass, on behalf of the National Executive, moved that the Ard Feis assert its conviction that it was the duty of the State to provide the opportunity of work for all its ablebodied population; that the Ard Feis pledge the members of all cumainn not to purchase foreign goods if Irish goods were available; and that in order to meet the immediate problem State schemes of work on housing, land reclamation, coast defence, afforestation and road and bridge construction and repairs should be immediately proceeded with.

Mr. Lemass added that if they got the declared supporters of their organisation to give voluntary support to Irish goods a very considerable easement in unemployment would result.

The resolutions were adopted.

OTHER RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions were passed (1) expressing satisfaction with the progress made in the campaign for the retention of the land annuities in Ireland, and urging the National Council to pursue this campaign with unabated vigour; and (2) describing as shameful the manner in which the Gaeltacht, whose inhabitants, because of their inability to find work, were fleeing the country, was treated, and urging the Fianna Fail deputies to do everything possible to improve the fishing and other industries in that area and to put the recommendations of the Gaeltacht Commission into operation.

Mr. Cormac Breathnach, moving the latter resolution, expressed the opinion that the Government had no intention of doing anything for the Gaeltacht. They were going back on what they did for the language at first. Recently persons were appointed to the Education Office who had no knowledge of Irish. This was causing dissatisfaction among the teachers, who felt they were being forced to learn Irish, while others were not compelled to do so.

A resolution was also adopted viewing with alarm the continued neglect of the sea fisheries by the Government, and their consequent deplorable decay, and calling on their T.D.'s to press persistently for the early and effective protection and development of the fisheries

The Feis, after the adjournment for tea, went into private session.

The proceedings will be resumed at 11 o'clock this morning.

PROPAGATION OF THE GOSPEL.

MEDICAL MISSION'S COMING OF AGE.

Addressing the annual meeting of the Women's Work Committee of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, which was held at 35 Molesworth street, Dublin, yesterday, Canon A. L. Woodward, Chairman of the Home Organisation, said that woman's influence in the work of the Society was felt everywhere, and he thought especially of the women's work when he said that Dublin's contribution to the Society, in view of the difficulties which were experienced, was wonderfully good and encouraging.

Much of the money which was contributed to the Society, Canon Woodward said, was got from the very poor. A fund in connection with the missionary work overseas, that had been very well supported, owed its existence to the thought and inspiration of a poor woman in a workhouse, who had suggested its establishment in a letter in which she enclosed five shillings.

The speaker also referred to problems which faced the Home Organisation in the British Isles.

LAYMAN'S GENEROUS GIFT.

In proposing a vote of thanks to Canon Woodward, the Rev. H. K. Woodward, Secretary of the Society in Dublin, mentioned that the Society's medical missions came of age this year, and said that it would be a good thing if Dublin could send £100 as a birthday gift. A generous layman, whose name he was not at liberty to disclose, had promised to give £50 provided that another £50 was got elsewhere, and so he appealed for subscriptions.

The day was also observed as a gift day. Mrs. H. Vere White (Limerick), who presided at the meeting, received the gifts, and a sale of flowers and cakes took place before the gathering dispersed.

YESTERDAY'S CASES IN THE COURTS.

A LOST BULL CHAIN.

LABOURER'S ACTION FOR SLANDER.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE SULLIVAN AND MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

In an action of Richard Murphy, a labourer, of Donanore, New Ross, against Miss Anastasia Hennessy, of Lacken, New Ross, the plaintiff appealed against the decision of Circuit Court Judge Doyle, dismissing his action for damages against the defendant for alleged slander.

Mr. Spain (instructed by Mr. T. J. Kelly), who appeared for the plaintiff and appellant, said that previous to the time when the words complained of were spoken his client had been in the employment of the defendant. In June, 1926, when the plaintiff was in the employment of another farmer in the neighbourhood, the defendant came to the house, and, in the presence of the brother of the plaintiff's employer, accused the plaintiff of having stolen a chain, which, she said, he took from her bull's nose.

Mr. Justice Sullivan—He ought to get a Victoria Cross for that. (Laughter.)

Mr. Spain—It was a very gallant deed, whoever did it; but she accused my client of doing it and of opening her gates and letting her cattle out to wander about the country. Two months later this lady again got on our track, and swore an information before the police, as the result of which a search warrant was issued and a search of my client's house was made by the Civic Guard for this chain.

In reply to the Court, counsel said that the Circuit Court Judge took the view that the words were not actionable.

Mr. Matheson (instructed by Messrs. Huggard, Brennan and Godfrey), who appeared for the defendant, submitted that there was no imputation of a criminal offence in the words.

Mr. Justice Sullivan said that this was an absolutely trivial case, and he thought it was open to the Circuit Court Judge to hold that the words spoken did not impute a criminal offence and dismiss the action.

Mr. Justice Hanna agreed.

The appeal accordingly was dismissed.

A PAIR OF ZEISS GLASSES.

GALWAY MAN'S CLAIM.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE SULLIVAN AND MR. JUSTICE HANNA.)

The plaintiff in the case of Mr. James J. Ward, garage proprietor, of Eyre square, Galway, against Colonel Austin Brennan, appealed from a judgment of the Circuit Court Judge dismissing his claim for £25 damages against the defendant for the alleged wrongful conversion by the defendant to his own use of one pair of Zeiss field glasses, which the plaintiff said that he lent to him in 1922, and which the defendant refused to return. The defence was that the glasses had been returned to the plaintiff.

Mr. J. J. Mooney (instructed by Mr. Henry St. J. Blake), who appeared for the plaintiff and appellant, said that the glasses were lent to the defendant when he was in charge of Free State troops in Galway in 1922, at a time when there was trouble with the irregulars. Colonel Brennan now, he understood, was in charge of the guard at Leinster House. The plaintiff did not get his glasses back.

It was stated in the evidence that the defendant gave instructions to his orderly to return the glasses; that his orderly informed him that he had done so, and that the defendant had no reason to doubt that his orderly had done so. The Circuit Court Judge held on the evidence that before the defendant left Galway in 1922 he had bona fide satisfied himself that the glasses had been returned.

The Court did not call on Mr. Casey, who (instructed by Messrs. Browne and McCann) appeared for the defendant.

Mr. Justice Sullivan said that he was of opinion that the Circuit Court Judge rightly came to the conclusion that the evidence did not establish an absence of care on the part of Colonel Brennan such as would entitle the plaintiff to a decree against him for the loss of the glasses. He held that the action of the Circuit Court Judge in dismissing the action was right.

Mr. Justice Hanna agreed. In determining what measure of obligation there was on Colonel Brennan, his lordship must, speaking for himself, have regard to the fact that Colonel Brennan did not seek the loan of these glasses, but that Mr. Ward rather pressed them upon him to use them during a very disturbed period.

The appeal was dismissed, with costs.

LANDS AT THOMASTOWN.

DOCTOR'S CLAIM.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE MEREDITH.)

In a case of Dr. Hugh E. C. Collins, of 25 Derby road, Nottingham, against Mrs. Norah Collins, a widow, residing at Mountbellew, Galway, the plaintiff sought to establish his title to certain lands situated at Thomastown, containing 69 acres, and also claimed rents and profits of the lands received by the defendant since the 13th of October, 1921, and an injunction to restrain the defendant from receiving the rents and profits.

The defendant admitted the plaintiff's claim to the lands and profit derived therefrom, but denied that she took possession of the land or withheld the rents or profits since her husband's death on the 13th October, 1921. She claimed an assignment of her dower in the lands and one-third of the rents and profits of the lands as from the date of the death of her husband down to the date of the assignment.

Mr. Price, K.C., and Mr. Maurice Walker (instructed by Mr. H. Concannon) appeared for the plaintiff.

There was no appearance for the defendant.

Mr. Justice Meredith made an order that the defendant should pay the outgoings included under Schedule A of the Income Tax Act, and also the costs of the case.

HORSE TRAINER AND TURF CLUB.

STEWARDS' APPEAL.

The hearing was resumed of the appeal by the defendants in the case of Mr. John T. Rogers, horse trainer, of Crotanstown, Curragh, against Mr. Charles Moore, Mr. Peter Fitzgerald and Major Evelyn Shirley, who are Stewards of the Turf Club, from a decision of Mr. Justice Meredith, in the High Court, declaring that a fine of £30 imposed on the plaintiff by the defendants was ultra vires; that the defendants had no power to impose such fines, and that they were trustees of the plaintiff for the £30 received by them, as Stewards of the Turf Club, to plaintiff's use, and wrongfully retained as a fine.

In the action in which the decision was given the plaintiff sought a declaration, amongst the others (which was granted), that the defendants had no power to fine a trainer for any omission to return a horse in the return to be made by a trainer by Rule 25 of the Rules and Orders of the Turf Club, other than the annual charge of four guineas and one guinea to the Club by Rule 28.

Mr. Jellett, K.C.; Mr. Phelps, K.C., and Mr. R. Brereton Barry (instructed by Messrs. O'Keeffe and Lynch) appeared for the appellants; and Mr. Overend, K.C.; Mr. FitzGerald, K.C., and Mr. J. J. Walsh (instructed by Messrs. George D. Fottrell and Sons) for the respondent.

Continuing his opening argument, Mr. Jellett explained the operation of the various rules, and said that the Stewards had power under the rules to impose a fine of 40 guineas upon the respondent, being one guinea for each horse entered on his list.

Chief Justice—As a matter of contract?

Mr. Jellett—As a matter of contract. It is all a matter of contract from start to finish. The Stewards under the powers they possessed could have fined him 40 guineas, but for some incidental consideration apparently they decided to limit the sum to £30.

Coming to his last proposition, with reference to the extensive powers with which the Stewards were invested, he argued that their decision on any question arising under the rules was absolutely conclusive, and could not be made the subject of proceedings in a Court of law.

Mr. Phelps, following on the same side, stated that he did not agree with Mr. Justice Meredith that the Turf Club was a proprietory club, and explained the position of Mr. Rogers, as a trainer, in relation to the Stewards, stating that he enjoyed a good many advantages, and that he was bound to carry out every rule of racing which was being administered by the Stewards of the Turf Club.

The further hearing was adjourned until next Monday.

COURT HELD UP.

"NOBODY READY TO GO ON."

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE JOHNSTON.)

On the calling of an action which appeared in the list in Mr. Justice Johnston's court, counsel who formally had been briefed in the case informed his lordship that he had received no instructions in the present application, which was to vary the Examiner's certificate.

Counsel for the plaintiff asked his lordship to allow the case to stand out of the list, and said that it could be mentioned again.

Mr. Justice Johnston said that this kind of thing always took place at the beginning of terms: nobody was ready to go on; everything was worked out to the end of the terms, and then the courts were overcrowded with work. He already had had to adjourn a case which would take two days. He did not see why this case should not have been gone on with: it had been lying derelict for three months now. He was held up by the parties and could do absolutely nothing. The case would go out of the list that day, and, of course, there would be no costs of that day for anybody.

DUBLIN DISTRICT COURT.

CHILD KILLED BY LORRY.

CHARGE AGAINST DRIVER FAILS.

(BEFORE MR. COLLINS.)

Informations were refused in the case in which Albert Trott, a lorry driver, was charged with causing the death of Kathleen Lawlor, aged two years, of Engine alley, Dublin, who died as the result of injuries received when knocked down in Meath street last Tuesday by a horse-drawn lorry, driven by Trott.

Mr. J. J. Ryan (Messrs. James O'Connor and Co., Solicitors) defended.

Evidence was given to show that the child ran out ran out under the horse's hooves, and that there was no negligence on the part of the driver.

ATTACKS ON CIVIC GUARDS.

TWO MORE MEN SENTENCED.

Sentences of one month's imprisonment with hard labour were imposed on Michael Fagan (32), poulterer, of 32 East Arran street, and Alexander Berkeley (32), an electrician, of 4 Mary street, who were charged with having assaulted Guards Scallon and Clarke at Little Mary street on October 13.

ASSAULT ON NEWSBOY.

TWO MONTHS' IMPRISONMENT.

Joseph Edelstein, described as of no business and no fixed address, was charged by Guard 54 C with committing a common assault on William Walshe, a newsboy, residing at Upper Church street, in North Earl street on Wednesday evening.

When the case was called and the charge read out,

The Justice remarked that his experience of this man was that his assaults were very common.

Guard 54 C deposed that, on the complaint of William Walshe, he took defendant into custody, and, when charged and cautioned at Store street Station, he reserved his defence.

William Walshe said that he was selling papers in North Earl street on Wednesday evening, and when the defendant came out of a publichouse he asked him to purchase a paper. Defendant made no reply, but promptly struck witness with his fist on the side of the face. Defendant then stated that some of the newsboys were a great nuisance.

Defendant, on oath, declared that he only pushed the persistent boy away. He was willing to buy Walshe a new suit of clothes and an overcoat.

The Justice imposed a sentence of two months' imprisonment with hard labour.

MISSING WATCH AND CHAIN.

Two young men, Philip Horan and Edward Byrne, both living in Camden street area, Dublin, were charged by Guard 154 A with taking a gold Waltham watch, valued at £5, a gold albert, valued at £3, and 18s. in money from the person of Denis Donovan, who resides in Pleasants street, while seeing him home last Friday evening.

Mr. Donovan deposed that he had been with Horan and other men in publichouses in Camden street on the date mentioned, and Horan and another man linked arms with him some of the way.

When he reached his own hall he found that his watch and chain were missing, and a sum of 18s. in cash.

The case was remanded on bail until Monday next.

A CASE ADJOURNED.

Inspector O'Donnell, of the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, referred to an adjourned case against a taxi driver, Denis Kavanagh, Keogh square, Inchicore, who had been charged with assaulting his wife, and only paying her, as was alleged, 10s. a week.

The inspector now stated that further inquiries had revealed the fact that defendant was paying his wife 33s. a week; that he was paying £3 a week for the complete purchase of his taxi, and that he was finding 30s. a week for garage upkeep. There was now a prospect that everything would go on harmoniously in the home. Defendant was an industrious, hard working man.

The Justice—Very good, the case is adjourned generally.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT COURT.

SEQUEL TO CRUMLIN ROAD ACCIDENT.

DAMAGES FOR CARRIER.

(BEFORE JUDGE ROCHE.)

William McCann, Crumlin, sued Christopher Sylvester, cinema proprietor, who runs a picture house at the Curragh Camp, to recover damages for the loss of a mare and loss of earnings in consequence of the negligence of the defendant in the driving of his motor car on the Crumlin road on February 4 last. The plaintiff's horse, with lorry attached, was in charge of one of his servants The horse, it was stated, was turning into an entrance to the brickworks, from behind a 'bus, and it turned so suddenly that the defendant's car, which was going at a speed of between fifteen and twenty miles an hour, hit the horse, with the result that one of its legs was fractured, so that it had to be destroyed.

The plaintiff, in his evidence, stated that he was a carrier, and that he had three other horses. He paid £32 for the mare, and he had lost about £2 a week by reason of the death of the animal.

The defendant denied negligence, and pleaded that the accident was due to the negligence of the plaintiff's servant.

The Judge decided in favour of the plaintiff, and gave a decree for £45.

Mr. W. G. Fallon (instructed by Mr. J. Vincent Brady) appeared for the plaintiff.

Mr. Nolan Whelan (instructed by Mr. H. P. Taylor) appeared for the defendant.

DUBLIN CIRCUIT (CRIMINAL) COURT.

John Carroll, Stephen's street, and Reuben Roads, dealer, Lower Mount street, were charged with receiving the property, knowing it to be stolen. There was a further charge against Roads of attempting to bribe Detective Officers Gordon and McAvoy by offering them £5.

James Byrne pleaded guilty, David Byrne was found guilty, and Reuben Roads also was found guilty on both charges. John Carroll was found not guilty, and discharged. The other accused men were put back for sentence.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

TONE AND COMMENT.

DUBLIN DEPRESSED.

RAILS HARDER.

Realisations were almost the order of the day on 'Change yesterday, and prices suffered an almost general relapse of a discouraging extent in view of the usual indisposition of operators to support prices while final adjustment sales for the settlement a week hence were being pressed. National Loans were well held, and Land Bonds 4½ per cent. hardened further. Consols also show improvement, but War Loan 5 per cent. and India 3 per cent. were realised at lower levels. An easier and dull market obtained for Banking securities. Guinness Ordinary were realised and left off dull at a set-back. Cables, etc., were unsettled, the "A" finally falling, while the "B" rallied after the previous day's severe slump. Great Southern Rails mostly tended to improve. Great Northern Ordinary was still bid for. Alliance Gas were easier. Leading Tobaccos, especially Imperials, were weak. Textiles, including Coats, Courtaulds and Spinners, were realised all day. Dunlop Rubbers were flat, and dropped to 15s. 4½d. at the close. Imperial Chemicals again gave way, and Margarine issues show fresh smart declines, though finally slightly over lowest. Burke issues closed harder. Oils were lower and Irish Times Preference issues steady at recent prices.

LONDON DULL.

GENERAL FALL IN PRICES.

Several factors contributed to the general weakness prevalent in all directions in the London Stock Markets yesterday. In the first place, fears of trouble in other directions than the Hatry group is resulting in general selling, and dealers are marking prices down everywhere as a precautionary measure. Secondly, the slump in Wall street on the previous day reacted adversely on this side, and, thirdly, the near approach of the carry-over is restricting business to the most meagre proportions. Among those most heavily affected were the Industrial issues generally, the International stocks and shares, and Home Rails. The announcement that there would be no alteration in the Bank rate failed to check the slide in quotations appreciably, and, while there was some recovery in certain instances towards the close, the initial losses were not nearly made good. Little of interest transpired in the Gilt-edged section, but, in common with other sections, a dull tone ruled, and the few movements recorded were against holders. Colonial Government Stocks eased the turn in several instances, and among Foreign Government Stocks Brazilians remained weak, while French Fours and Poland Sevens finished lower. A heavy tone characterised Home Rails at the commencement, and quotations were marked substantially lower. Among Colonial and Foreign Rails San Paulo Ordinary, "Leos" and "Canpacs" went off sharply, while the Buenos Ayres issues eased the turn. American Rails also showed some sharp losses.

General weakness prevailed in the Industrial sections. Talking Machines went lower all round, as did the International issues and Match descriptions. The Horne group of Cement issues lost further ground. Meetings of directors of Associated Anglo-Atlantic Corporation and the Carmelite Trust, which are in the Horne group, were held yesterday afternoon. It is stated that the meetings considered whether statements should be issued regarding the fall in the shares.

INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

UNSETTLED CONDITIONS.

INTERNATIONALS WEAKER.

With Wall street still very unsettled, a further shrinkage in values occurred in practically all sections of the Industrial market yesterday. While the international favourites were mainly affected, the whole list, including some of the better-class securities, reflected the uncertain conditions at present prevailing. Consequently there was no incentive for professional operators to give support, though here and there final prices were above the lowest. Margarine issues were subject to sales from Amsterdam, and a fair amount of forced liquidation from other Continental centres was reported for such shares as Swedish Match and Kreuger and Toll.

Although finishing above the worst, Hydro-Electric lost 4 at 65½, with Brazilian Traction Common 1¾ down on balance at 69¾, after dipping to 68½. International Nickels gave way to 52¼ at one time, rallied to 53⅝, and being finally quoted 53⅛. International Holdings weakened further to the extent of ¾ to 9.

Radio Corporations reflected the overnight slump in Wall street at 86, but they rallied in the later dealings to 89, which, however, still left them with a net loss of 3. Cables and Wireless "B" stock weakened further to the extent of 2 to 52.

Columbia Graphophones were subject to rather sharp movements. They opened around 11, eased to 10¾, strengthened later to 11⅜, to finish sellers at the former figure, which, however, still left them fractionally better on balance. H.M.V.'s gave way to 5⅞ in the early dealings, eventually closing around 6, showing a net loss of 1/16. Vocalions weakened to 18s. 9d.

Little disposition was seen to support Electricals, but British Insulated rose 1/16 to 4 1/16. Of the Equipments, Henleys gave way to 6 5/16, Associateds to 34s. 3d., General Electrics to 51s. 3d., with Callenders a few pence easier at 78s. 6d. Among the Supply shares, Calcutta Electrics found supporters at 55s. 6d., but Atlas Light and Power Ord. receded to 26s. 9d. Motor shares failed to benefit by the opening of the Olympia Show.

Coal and Engineering descriptions presented a heavy appearance. Thornycrofts relapsed ¼ to 4⅛, with Wm. Cory marked down 1s. 6d. to 62s. On the other hand, Bolckow Vaughans steadied to 5s. and Vickers to 8s. 1½d.

A further decline was witnessed in Margarine issues on selling from Amsterdam, the Unions losing 1/16 to 4 5/16 and the Unies ¼ at 4⅝. United Dairies continued on offer at 33s. 3d. and Aerated Bread gave way 9d. to 21s. Liptons receded to 4s. 7½d. and International Tea Ord. to 25s. 3d.

Artificial Silk and Textiles reflected the prevailing tendency, though movements on balance did not amount to much. American Celanese Common receded ⅛ to 6¼, and British Celanese Ord. lost the turn at 1 3/16. Courtaulds continued on the down grade, the final quote of 3 5/16 leaving them 1/16 lower. Snia Viscosa gave way 6d. to 15s. Of the Textile leaders, Bradford Dyers at 35s., Bleachers at 28s. 6d., and Listers at 22s. all shed a few pence.

In the Brewery section, Distillers lost 1s. to 72s., and Meuxs 1s. 6d. to 34s. 9d. Benskins at 3 13/16 and Guinness at 4 9/16 both closed 1/16 lower. Tobaccos had a dull appearance. "Bats" lost the turn at 6 3/16, as did "Imps" also to 4⅞. Carreras "A" gave way ¼ to 15 7/16.

Newspapers shared in the general trend, and prices were generally easier. Inveresks slipped back ⅛ to 1⅜. Banking issues were generally marked lower. In the Insurance section, Sun Life weakened a point to 52, and Sun Insurance were marked down ¼ to 39.

Among Shipping descriptions, Cunards proved quiet around 23s. 3d., and Royal Mails held at 39. Elder Dempster 5½ per cent. Prefs. fell 6d. to 12s. 6d., and P. and O. Defd. proved a dull spot, declining 9d. to 53s. 3d.

The "Red Triangle" group continued to display weakness. Allied Cements were offered down to 1s., and finished 6d. lower at 1s. 3d., while Cement Products fluctuated sharply, and closed fractionally lower at 5s.; the Defd. were levelled to 1s. 3d., and Wiggins Ords. shed 6d. further to 2s. Anglo-Atlantics declined 6d. to 3s. 6d., and the Defd. 3d. to 9d. Carmelite Trusts held at 3s. 9d.

In other directions there were more sellers than buyers about, with the result that dealers had no alternative but to mark prices down in several instances. United Molasses suffered a sharp setback, the final quote of 6¼ leaving them with a loss of 7/16. The Swedish group were also affected, Kreuger and Toll falling a point to 33¼ and Swedish Match "B" shares ⅝ to 17⅞. Imperial Chemicals continued depressed. Dunlops weakened 6d. to 15s. 6d.

OIL SHARES EASIER.

Conditions prevailing in New York and Continental centres continue the governing factor so far as the market in Oil Shares is concerned. Advices received overnight from New York were the reverse of helpful, there having been widespread weakness and liquidation in that centre on Wednesday. Throughout the list a dull tendency prevailed for the greater part of the day, scattered liquidation locally and sales from the Continent having a depressing influence. Paris hardly constituted a factor, but liquidation was in progress, particularly in Royal Dutch from Amsterdam. Brussels also was a seller, the sales from this centre being accompanied by a report of a failure. In the afternoon, however, a rally occurred, which was particularly marked in Royal Dutch, of which New York came in a strong buyer. Nevertheless, these shares and most other favourites finished the day showing losses. Shells shared in the firmer tendency which developed at the end. Shrinkages occurred in Anglo-Persians and Burmahs. The Eagle issues commanded very little attention, and consequently fluctuated within narrow limits. Business in Venezuelans was small, and prices slightly easier. Elsewhere there was little of interest.

RUBBER SHARES HEAVY.

Interest in the Rubber Share Market remained on an extremeely small scale, and quotations went off further all round, many of the depreciations being of substantial amounts. A dull and easier tendency also characterised the commodity market, spot and October going off to 9⅝d. per lb., while December and January to March were only 9 15/16d. and 10⅛d. per lb., respectively.

MARKET GLEANINGS.

THE Swiss Federal Council has given its full approval to the decision of the Swiss Federal Finance Department to abolish the forced currency of notes of the National Bank of Switzerland, and return to the gold standard.

ATTEMPTS to obtain a loan of 9,000,000 dollars (£1,800,000) in New York or London to protect the Brazil coffee market have failed, according to the Jornal de Brazil. Three banking houses are named as having declined to advance sums to meet the emergency arising from over-production."

MR. JAMES FLEMING FYFE JAMIESON, Ruthven, Meigle, Forfar, a director of William Dixon, coalmasters, of Glasgow, left, in addition to real estate and settled property, unsettled personal estate in Great Britain value £1,332,433, of which his holdings in the Burmah Oil Company amount to £582,439, in the Anglo-Persian Oil Company to £50,185, in the "Shell" Transport and Trading Company to £16,053, in the Imperial Chemical Industries to £32,709, and in William Dixon to £26,900.

LONDON MINING MARKET WEAK.

LIMITED DEALINGS IN ALL SECTIONS.

The Mining Market failed to escape the general depression evident yesterday, and it was only due to the fact that the open position has been reduced to very small proportions that the weakness was not more pronounced. Dealings in Kaffirs were very limited, but it was noticeable that the good-class shares generally held up well. The Eastern descriptions, where they moved at all, sought lower levels, small reductions in the prices of Brakpan, Springs Mines, and West Springs being recorded. East Rand and West Rand were lower, the last-named notwithstanding the publication of the quarterly report. In the Rhodesian department there was nothing like the animation which was witnessed a short time ago, and declines were fairly general. Chartered, in the absence of demand, steadily receded, while Tanks were again a weak spot on persistent offering from Brussels, where, it was rumoured, a failure had occurred. Of the Northern issues, Bwana M'Kubwa were, perhaps, the steadiest market. At one time the shares were in demand on reports of good developments, but as no official information was forthcoming, inquiries fell off and the shares were finally unaltered. In the Diamond section a little investment demand lifted the price of De Beers Pref. to a small extent, but the Defd. were unchanged, and Consolidated Diamond fell away in the absence of inquiries. A further heavy drop of £3 1s. 3d. occurred in the price of tin, bringing it down to £186 16s. 3d. per ton, or the lowest level reached since the middle of 1923, the average price for which year was £202. It may be recalled that the highest price reached since 1920 was £321 in 1926. The share market was not unnaturally depressed, and, although dealings were not on a large scale, quotations were marked down almost indiscriminately. Rio Tinto in the Copper section fell back, followed by Tharsis. Elsewhere San Francisco were firm, any shares on offer being readily taken, and St. John Del Rey improved; but Mining Trust, Tigon and Mexican Corporation weakened. Closing prices:—

ROYAL MAIL STEAM PACKET COMPANY.

LORD JELLICOE RETIRES FROM TRUSTEESHIP.

PRUDENTIAL ASSURANCE COMPANY APPOINTED.

We are officially informed that the Court of Directors of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company have appointed Mr. Arthur B. Cauty and Mr. William Lewis to be directors of the company. Mr. Cauty is the general manager and director of the Oceanic Steam Navigation Company, Ltd., and the White Star Line, Ltd., and Mr. Lewis is the general manager and a director of the Pacific Steam Navigation Company.

The Court of Directors of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company, at their meeting yesterday, received a letter from Admiral of the Fleet Earl Jellicoe, tendering his resignation as a trustee for the holders of the company's First Debenture Stock, as he considered that the interests of the company and of the debenture holders would be better served by his office being held by an important corporation. The Court of Directors accepted Lord Jellicoe's resignation with much regret, as they valued his connection with the company, having in mind the many years his father had been associated with it, and they tendered Lord Jellicoe their appreciation of, and thanks for, his past services.

The Court of Directors filled the vacancy by appointing the Prudential Assurance Company, Limited, as a trustee for the holders of the First Debenture Stock.

The Court of Directors had before them the circular to the Second Debenture Stockholders, dated July 15 last, in which the remaining individual trustee for both the First and Second Debenture Stocks, Viscount St. Davids, intimated that he might possibly resign the position of trustee for the Second Debenture Stockholders; and, in view of the fact that important corporations of the highest standing now represent the holders of both First and Second Debenture Stocks—namely, the Prudential Assurance Company, Limited, being trustee for the First Debenture Stock and the Midland Bank Executor and Trustee Company, Limited, being trustee for the Second Debenture Stock—the interests of both classes of Debenture Stockholders are safely protected for the future, and, such being the case, the Court of Directors resolved that, in the event of Viscount St. Davids retiring, it would not be necessary to fill the vacancy.

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS.

ARGENTINE SOUTHERN LAND.—Dividend of 6 per cent., less tax, for the year to 30th June, 1929; carry forward £30,939.

ATLAS LIGHT AND POWER.—Final dividend of 3 per cent., less tax, on the old Ord. Shares of the company, numbered 1 to 2,750,000, inclusive, making 5 per cent. for the year.

AUSTRALIAN DUNLOP.—At the annual meeting of Dunlop Perdriau Rubber Co. in Melbourne the Chairman stated:—"The board intends as a result of the merger to eliminate overlapping expenditure in production and merchandising and to undertake an overhaul of manufacturing methods in order to achieve the benefits of mass production and efficiency. The economies will benefit both shareholders and customers, as high-grade commodities will be sold at lower prices. The net profit on joint operations is £55,000, which may be considered satisfactory. A 10 per cent. dividend will be declared. The subsidiary shoe company has shown good profits. I am convinced that the merger was wise and has fully justified itself by results."

BANDARAPOLA CEYLON CO.—Interim dividend of 5 per cent. actual on account of the year to 31st December next.

BUTLERS WHARF.—Interim dividend of 5 per cent. actual. (Same.)

BRITISH AND DOMINIONS FILM.—The result of the trading of the British and Dominions Film Corporation for the fifteen and a half months to June 1, 1929, is a loss of £5,387. It was anticipated that the films produced would enjoy early release in the first working year, states the report, but by the time films were available for booking under the Cinematograph Films Act, 1927, American companies with films already in stock had booked the favourable dates. When the programme of production arranged for was nearing completion, it was apparent that a change in the industry was taking place, and the chairman visited Hollywood. Licence to produce sound films on the Western Electric system has been obtained, and studios are being equipped at Elstree. Production of sound films was commenced in August, jointly with the Gramophone Co., Ltd. (H.M.V.), and satisfactory distribution arranged. Four talking pictures will be ready for release prior to Christmas, 1929. In the present circumstances it is impossible for the directors to foresee the result of the silent films, but the sound synchronisation of one or more of them is under consideration.

CEYLON PROPRIETARY TEA.—Interim dividend of 10 per cent., less tax, on Ord. Shares. (Same.)

CALCUTTA ELECTRIC SUPPLY.—Interim dividend of 5 per cent. actual. (Same.)

F.M.S. RUBBER PLANTERS' ESTATES.—Interim dividend of 5 per cent. actual on account of the year to 31st December next.

GOLD FIELDS RHODESIAN DEVELOPMENT CO.—Final dividend of 5 per cent. (6d. per share), less tax, again making a total of 10 per cent., and leaving £50,847 to be carried forward. Profit for the year showed an increase of £12,585.

HOWARD AND BULLOUGH (ACCRINGTON).—Interim dividend of 2½ per cent. on Ord. Shares, less tax.

HERBERT MORRIS.—A further dividend on Ordinary Shares, making a total of 15 per cent. (as last year), free of tax, for year. £51,605 forward.

MERLIMAU PEGOH RUBBER.—Interim dividend of 5 per cent., on account of the year ending 31st December, 1929.

MAMBAU (F.M.S.) RUBBER CO.—Final dividends of 6 per cent. on the Ord. and Pref. Shares, making 10 per cent. on both classes of shares for the year to 30th June last.

NATIONAL BANK OF AUSTRALASIA.—Interim dividend for the past half-year to 30th September, 1929, at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum on both the £10 (fully paid) and £8 (£5 paid) shares. (Same as last half-year.)

SHANGHAI ELECTRIC CONSTRUCTION CO.—Interim dividend at the rate of 5 per cent. actual, free of tax, on account of the year 1929.

ST. JOHN DEL RAY.—Interim dividend of 6d. per share on Ord. Shares, less tax. (Same.)

UNITED RAILWAYS OF THE HAVANA AND REGLA WAREHOUSES.—Final dividend of 2½ per cent., less tax, on the 5 per cent. Cum. Pref. Stock in respect of the year ended 30th June, 1929; carry forward £120,140.

WALLARAH COAL.—Interim dividend for half-year ending 30th June, 1929, of 1/- per share, free of tax. (Last year nil for same period.)

BANK OF ENGLAND RETURN.

Owing mainly to a contraction of fully £3,500,000 in the note circulation, the Bank of England reserve is £4,500,000 higher for the week at £32,688,077. The influx from abroad raised the coin and bullion £935,000 to £132,932,889, the amount of gold coin and bullion in the issue department being £131,706,365. Repayments by the market lowered the other securities fully £4,000,000, and there was an increase of £1,000,000 in the public deposits. The Government securities are £3,370,000 higher presumably due to Government borrowing on Ways and Means, and there is a net increase of £2,673,000 in the private deposits, the total of which has been raised to £107,000,000. The proportion of reserve to liabilities is 3 1/16 better at 28 p.c.

THE MONEY MARKET.

LOANS AND DISCOUNTS EASY.

There was again plenty of credit available in Lombard street yesterday, and borrowers were usually able to satisfy their overnight requirements at 5 p.c. and under. Old money was renewed at 5 p.c. for a day and at 5½ p.c. for a week.

Bill rates were still on the easy side, fine three months' maturities not being better than 6⅛ p.c., while Continental buying was still in evidence at a shade under that figure. Longer-dated bills were also quoted at 6 p.c., and there were buyers of the new Treasuries at 6 3/16 p.c.

At the Bank of England bar gold, valued at £1,617 was bought. The efflux for 1929 to date thus amounts to £22,215,618. Owing to China selling, both the spot and forward prices of silver fell ⅛d. to 23d. and 23 1/16d. per oz., respectively. The market price of gold recovered 1½d. to 84s. 11½d. per fine oz.

The New York exchange reached a fresh high record for this year, for the rate crossed 4.87, and finished only a little below that figure, and 1/32 higher for day. Montreal rose ⅜ to 4.91⅜. Another feature was the weakness of South American currencies. The Argentine dollar further declined to 46 15/16d., the Uruguayan dollar to 48d., and the Chilean peso was also cheaper at 39.53, while the Brazilian currency was a shade weaker. The French exchange, after falling to 123.85, finished unaltered at 123.87. Italy, Germany, Holland and Denmark all moved in favour of sterling, but Belgian belgas were a little better.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPHS.

LIQUIDATION IN LONDON.

The condition of Stock markets yesterday was even worse than that of the previous day; for there was a considerable amount of liquidation, which appeared to affect all sections of the House, thus causing general depression. To some extent this liquidation would seem to have been precipitated by the decision of the Stock Exchange Committee in regard to the settlement of bargains in the shares of the Hatry companies. It had been hoped that where it was possible to match bargains a considerable proportion of the transactions now being investigated would be wiped out, thus removing the likelihood of losses in connection therewith. This hope, however, has been dissipated by the reiteration of the ruling that a bargain done in the Stock Exchange must be carried to a conclusion. Although the date of the postponed special settlement in the shares in question has not yet been fixed, those affected appear to have decided to sell securities that are saleable in view of possible heavy losses later on with the effect upon prices indicated. While this is the primary factor in the present depression, there are other considerations which do not help sentiment or restore confidence. The continued weakness of the Horne group is disquieting, and as regards these shares it was difficult, if not impossible, yesterday to sell any considerable lines at the nominal quoted prices. The set-back in Wall street is another influence, while Home Rails in particular have been depressed by the fear of trouble in the coal trade; and as regards the general tone, the Government has not helped by proposing an enlargement of the pensions payable to widows. Fortunately the monetary situation is relatively satisfactory, but, with so many adverse factors to consider, this is practically ignored. Unless the position becomes worse, many shares must now be attractively cheap, and yesterday brokers reported that signs of bargain-hunting were not entirely lacking. It requires a considerable amount of courage to buy under the conditions now ruling, but the experience of many years shows that the biggest profits are usually made when purchases are effected under the gloomiest surroundings.

AN INDUSTRIAL PREFERENCE.

For the fall in many Industrial shares in recent weeks there has been sufficient reason in the unsatisfactory position disclosed of the companies concerned, but in some cases prices have given way on selling induced by other considerations. Recent events and prospective heavy losses have led to a substantial reduction in holdings even of good shares, with the result that those who have the courage to buy now are almost certain to do well in the end. A share that appears to have been depressed by general conditions is the 8 per cent. Participating Preference of Morrisons (Gowns), Ltd., a company formed to acquire several businesses of costume and mantle manufacturers in Glasgow. Combined profits for the years ended July 31, 1925, 1926, 1927 and 1928, were £16,098, £11,119, £19,035 and £31,725, respectively. In a statement issued last year the directors expressed the opinion that the past profits are capable of substantial increase, and in view of proposed extensions the net amount for the current year was estimated at not less than £40,000. The fixed dividend on the Preference shares absorbs £8,000, as there are 400,000 of these issued, the denomination being 5s. They are entitled to an extra distribution—up to a maximum of 2 per cent., making 10 per cent. in all—after payment of 8 per cent. on the Ordinary. The Preference shares have now fallen to about 2s. 6d., at which the yield on an 8 per cent. basis is 16 per cent.

NEW YORK AND THE HATRY COLLAPSE.

The Paris edition of the New York Herald publishes the following notice:—

"Rumours that have been current in Wall street that several Stock Exchange firms, and particularly one firm having branches in many foreign capitals, had been affected by the Hatry failure in London and were generally in a weakened condition, are pronounced by the Business Conduct Committee of the New York Stock Exchange as absolutely without foundation. The committee, after an examination, has reported that not only was this firm not involved, either directly or indirectly, with the Hatry collapse, but also that its affairs were in the best of condition.

CATTLE.

DUBLIN (Metropolitan).—Any variation in numerical strength of supplies of live stock was not such as could influence the trend of dealings in any degree. The gathering in both divisions was again of unusually large dimensions for time of year, and mainly of plain or roughish character. In fact, there was a conspicuously small percentage of animals to be seen with any real pretention to quality or finish. There was a large attendance of shipping buyers, including several strangers and full representation of the home trade, but market moved in a particularly slow and cautious groove from opening to a belated and tedious close. Values in the main were bumping heavily on previous bottom level, with, perhaps, a further slip down for the commoner element of supply in the pressure to clear. In a casual survey of cross-Channel live stock and meat markets over past week or so, little stability is reflected from any direction, and in several shires drawing on here rather biggish surpluses of cattle had to be reckoned with on occasions, thus necessitating exporters to regulate their selections and consignments carefully to minimise hazardous consequences. Many months ago small and handy-weight cattle had become fashionable and, up to this month, nearly everywhere popular, and it was thought that heavy beasts would soon be regulated to a fact of the past. Now, however, tastes have again changed, and shippers are in quest of extra heavy fat types of heifers and bullocks, the bigger and fatter the better, and these recently are topping market in price in their preferential sale over the previously popular small-weighted quality cattle. Practically no new feature in trade for home quality sheep of handy weight; heavier sorts harder to cash. Ewes were looked for; smaller inquiry for shipping hoggets and lambs.

	Numbers on sale this week	compared with last.	Corresponding weeks of 1928.	1927.
Beasts	5,541	46†	4,475	4,890
Sheep and Lambs	7,050	387*	5,654	6,528
Veal Calves	9	4†	18	14

* Increase; † decrease.

Heavy beef cattle, providing quality and finish was right, were eagerly sought for by shippers, and topped market in value, say, 42s. to 43s., and, perhaps, 44s. in exceptional cases. However, bullocks up to 13 cwt. or more and heifers weighing around 11 to 11½ cwt. where wanting longer keep to ripen to A.1. condition were not so keenly bid for, even at a difference of, perhaps, 2s. to 3s. per cwt. less. In fact, really useful sorts in latter category could be purchased at from 37s. 6d. to 40s., and, apart from the nicer selections of heifers and steers taken by local victuallers at from 41s. to 42s. 6d. per cwt., it is questionable if any other classes of cattle on market (bar fancy blacks) realised more than £2 per cwt. At all events, that figure was hard enough to top, let alone to beat, outside the specialities referred to. Good commercial figured from 36s. to 37s., and rougher, say, 33s. to 35s. per cwt. Beef cows a slow, dragging sale. A small percentage of young cows of heiferish class made 32s. 6d. to 34s. and 35s. per cwt. After these, terms were uncertain; no buyers for thin sorts.

Sheep market about unchanged and steady for Dublin qualities worth, say, 56s. to 74s. or 75s. per head, but heavy mutton harder and weaker to cash. Fair inquiry for good ewes, say, 60s. to 65s. and 67s. 6d. Best mutton averaged 9d. to 10d. and 10½d. per lb. Lambs a poorish market, those figuring up to 50s. and 54s. were big weight for money. Best sorts 36s. to 46s. each. Shipping trade for hoggets and lambs depressed and narrower.

DUBLIN (DAIRY).—Offerings of dairy cattle totalled 440 head, which was more than for many weeks past. Trade proved much quieter in a general way, with a set-back of perhaps 20/- to 40/- per head in values. Still, for springers or fresh-calved cows of outstanding merit and character previous tip-top terms were occasionally repeated in shipping selections. Choice middle-aged heavy-capacity milchers £24 to £28, and occasionally around £29 or £30; prime young cows and heifers £21 to £24 and £25, perhaps £26. Local dairymen looking for fresh stockers inside £15 to £22 each, small cows, etc., £11 to £14; Scotch and Cheshire shippers harder to fit in price.

DUBLIN PIG.—Market of swine totalled 1,013 head, being 54 less than last week's gathering. Buyers in good attendance, and trade of healthier competitive nature at generally a firmer repetition of previous currencies. In fact an energetic Yorkshire buyer helped to tone up things, especially for suitable hogs around 9 to 10 or 11 stone weight. Choice quality hogs averaged 86/- to 90/- per cwt., plainer sorts 76/- to 84/-; fancy small-weights, say, around 5 to 6 stone, in meaty condition up to 100/- per cwt. or over; sow pigs 56/- to 70/- and 73/- per cwt.

YORK.—Good entry of Irish store cattle, mostly of first quality. Trade ruled slow, and dealers complain they cannot buy in Ireland to meet prices offered. Late rates maintained; few good English stores also shown. Large supply of dairy cattle; late rates maintained. Ewe trade almost over; good supply of lambs; fair trade at last week's rates.

BRISTOL.—Fair supply of beef at 86/- to 90/- for best quality. Fair supply of mutton sold at 1/1 to 1/2 and lamb at 1/2 to 1/3 per lb. About 200 store cattle were offered, but trade was slow at late rates, and some remained unsold. Milch cows £24 to £28 and up to £34 for exceptional quality.

BIRMINGHAM PIG.—Small supply; steady to good demand, with values about maintained, though smalls showed a slightly easier tendency and bacons firmer. Quotations:—Sizeable bacons 15/6, cutters 16/6 to 17/-, and sows 13/6 per score dead weight.

RATHMINES ACCIDENT.

CORONER ADJOURNS INQUEST.

As criminal proceedings have been brought against the driver of the van involved in the runaway horse accident in Rathmines on Tuesday, Dr. Oswald Murphy, Deputy City Coroner, adjourned the inquest on the victim, Mrs. Mary Kathleen Boyce, newsagent, 138 Belfield terrace, Upper Rathmines, Dublin, which was opened in the Meath Hospital, Dublin, yesterday.

Mrs. Boyce was walking along Wynnefield road between 5 and 6 p.m. on Tuesday when she was thrown against the wall, and crushed by the runaway horse. Her youngest child, which she had been wheeling in a perambulator, was injured about the head, but not seriously. Two other children accompanied her, but escaped unhurt.

Yesterday only evidence of identification and of the cause of death was offered.

Michael Boyce, the husband of the deceased woman, who was much distressed, said that his wife was thirty-eight years of age. He did not know anything of the occurrence.

Dr. McCabe, house surgeon, Meath Hospital, said that Mrs. Boyce was unconscious when she was admitted, and died within half an hour without having regained consciousness. Three ribs were broken, and there were extensive internal injuries. Death was due to shock and hemorrhage following the injuries.

Replying to Mr. Charles, solicitor, who appeared for the next-of-kin, the doctor said that the injuries suggested that the deceased woman had been crushed by the shafts of the lorry.

Mr. E. H. Burne (Messrs. Gerald Byrne and Company), who appeared for the driver, and also the owners of the van, the Irish Direct Trading Company, expressed sympathy with the relatives on behalf of his clients.

STORE CATTLE SALES.

MESSRS. GAVIN LOW, LTD.

The number of cattle shown at yesterday's store sale was about the same as last week, and a fair demand was experienced, at fully recent rates, for all lots showing quality and condition. Young cattle are still neglected, and prices for these are in favour of buyers. Aberdeen-Angus and Hereford crosses made from 42/6 to 37/- per cwt.; horned bullocks and heifers from 38/- to 31/-.

MESSRS. GANLY, SONS AND CO.

The value of store cattle having fallen to the lower level of prices now current, there was a rather steadier tone in the demand at yesterday's sale. The attendance was somewhat better, and biddings were on a more even basis than last week. Entries were larger than for some weeks past, and included some useful lots of aged bullocks and heifers. Bullocks sold up to £18, and heifers to £18 10/-, the live weight prices being about 34/- to 39/- per cwt., with the plainer sorts at rather lower rates. A choice pen of Aberdeen-Angus heifers, consigned from Sir Thomas Stafford, Bart., made 42/- per cwt. Another lot of the same class, from F. J. Monson, realised 42/- per cwt., and a grand pen of shorthorn heifers, the property of W. J. Bond, were 42/- per cwt.

MESSRS. R. AND J. WILKINSON.

There was a fair entry of cattle for this sale, including some nice quality Hereford cross bullocks and heifers from the County Tipperary. Trade on the whole was about on the same level as of late, the better classes making late rates and moderate lots continuing to be very difficult to dispose of at satisfactory prices. The Hereford crosses sold at £17 12/6 and £15 10/- (40/- and 38/-) for heifers; £17 10/-, £16 10/-, and £15 10/- (37/-, 36/6, and 36/-) for bullocks. A pen of A.A. crosses, at £20 10/-, £19 5/-, and £17, were 40/- to 38/- per cwt. A good lot of polled bullocks, weighing 10 cwt., made £18 15/-. The better pens of horned bullocks and heifers sold from £18 to £15 each, bullocks making about 34/- to 35/- per cwt.; heifers, 36/- to 38/- per cwt.; other cattle were irregular at lower rates.

BOXING.

GENARO GAINS WORLD'S "FLY" TITLE.

CARNERA'S QUICK WIN.

STANLEY DOWN THREE TIMES IN 100 SECONDS.

Mr. Jeff Dickson's courage in face of the opposition of the British Boxing Board of Control had its reward at the Royal Albert Hall, London, last night, when he staged the most ambitious boxing programme seen in England for many years. The big attraction was very big. Six feet 7in. in height is Primo Carnera, the Italian heavy-weight, who fought Jack Stanley, of Deptford, and his weight is such that at the weiging-in earlier in the day Mr. Dickson, the promoter, had to stand on the scales in order that the machine could register the enormous figure of 20st. 1lb.

Although the heavy-weights were not fighting for a title, the personality of Carnera had impressed itself upon the boxing public so much that the fact that Frankie Genaro, of America, and Ernie Jarvis, the English boy, were meeting for the world's fly-weight title was almost forgotten until the men actually were in the ring.

The misfortune which had dogged Mr. Dickson's footsteps since he decided to stage his show, and the greatest of which was the tragic death of Johnny Hill, who was originally to have met Genaro, proved consistent to the last. At the weighing-in the doctor would not pass Alf Mancini, of Notting Hill, as fit to box Jack Griffiths, Mancini admitting that he was feeling very ill and had a temperature. Fred. Green, of Blackfriars, filled the vacancy.

A scene unprecedented in the history of the game in England took place during the evening, when everybody rose to observe a ten seconds silence in memory of the late Johnny Hill.

HUNDRED SECONDS FIGHT.

When the preliminary bouts were over, Carnera stepped into the ring. He was smiling as the cheers greeted him, and he bowed four times, but the cheers that greeted Stanley were a positive roar. After Mr. Ted Broadribb, the referee, had spoken to the men, Carnera walked to the Englishman, hit him with the left, and Stanley went down three times—in as many seconds—and the referee stopped the contest.

The actual duration of the fight was 100 seconds. It was the shortest heavy-weight contest since Georges Carpentier defeated Joe Beckett.

Interviewed after the fight, Carnera said through his interpreter: "Really, I had not started. I led with what was nothing more than a feeler. I found that my right had more of an open path than I had expected. The result was that I saw that my man was groggy, and immediately I sent a left across. Even then I scarcely expected to end things, but it was strong to put Stanley down once more. What really ended the fight was a right to the heart. I certainly knew I was fit. I was never called upon to exert myself."

STANLEY ON CARNERA.

Stanley declared:—"I have never seen anything like it in my life. All his blows undoubtedly were clean, but it seems to me that to do anything with a man like that there would have to be in the ring three opponents for him."

Stanley bore unmistakable evidence of the short but telling experience he had had. In his dressing-room, well within two minutes of the end of the bout, he pointed to the left side of his chin, and there indicated swelling which thus early had reached the height of an inch.

After the ten seconds' silence for Johnny Hill, Yvon Trevedic and young Stribling were introduced from the ring. "Stribling will meet Carnera in Paris," said the announcer. "We hope he enjoys it," laughed the crowd.

JARVIS ON HIS DEFEAT.

The fight for the World's Fly-weight Championship between Genaro and Jarvis went the full distance, the American winning on points.

Jarvis was very regretful over the fact that for the second time in ten years he had had his face cut. "It was most unfortunate," he said, "that in the second instance it should have been in such an important match as this. I have to admit that Genaro is a good boxer, but I am also bound to plead that from the second round I was greatly handicapped by the bruise which I received over my left eye from the cuff of Genaro's glove. I cannot help but admire Genaro's boxing, but I do feel that in other circumstances I could have put up a much better show, and at the present moment I am more than willing to meet Genaro in another match."

"He was a real tough little kid," said Genaro immediately after his victory. "He put up a proper game show, and though I felt all the time that I was winning I was compelled to admire the great show your Englishman put up."

HOW CARNERA WON.

Feinting, and then two left blows by the Italian began the fight. Two right hooks to the jaw did not appear to do much damage, but Stanley went down. He was down for a count of eight, and he tried to mix it, but he got nowhere near the Italian, who bore in, and sending both hands to the head, had the Englishman staggering round the ring.

Stanley kept his feet somehow, but as the Italian came up to him with his swinging punches, Stanley had nothing to give in exchange. He could only try to stagger away from the giant, and Carnera, seeing his chance, went for his man, who took two counts of eight before a left uppercut sent him to the boards for the third time, and the referee stopped the fight in favour of Carnera.

Within a few minutes of his fight with Stanley, Carnera was in the ring again, with Pat Tarling, another "little" heavy-weight. Tarling gave a better exhibition than Stanley, but Carnera was not fighting—he was smiling and sparring—but nevertheless Tarling's right eye was cut open before the end of the first round. The Italian seemed unable to pull his punches, and in the second round Tarling went twice through the ropes, and signified very clearly that the joke, as indeed it was, had gone far enough, and Carnera had won yet another bout—two within ten minutes.

GENARO BEATS JARVIS.

AMERICAN TOO CLEVER FOR ENGLISH LAD.

ROUND ONE—Genaro looked for an opening, swung the right to the head, and then went into a clinch. Genaro appeared to use his weight at close quarters and he scored with a left on the breakaway. The American soon proved that he had a dangerous right, but Jarvis was quick enough to slip out of trouble, but he had to fight on the defensive for most of the round.

ROUND TWO—As Genaro came rushing in Jarvis met him with a good straight left, and the English boy was not giving ground now. As Genaro swung his right Jarvis sent in a full right to the ribs. Soon afterwards Jarvis stopped a right swing, only to take a left to the jaw. It was the most damaging blow of the fight so far. Jarvis, however, refused to break ground, and, although most of the fighting was at close quarters, Jarvis gave as much as he received in some rugged fighting.

GENARO TOO CLEVER.

ROUND THREE—Jarvis was forced to the ropes, and when he came out of a clinch he had to take a nasty right, which caused a gash over his left eye. Genaro kept boring in. He was too clever for Jarvis, and before the end of the round he had proved that he had a fine punch in both hands. That Jarvis knew this there was no doubt, for he was on the defensive.

ROUND FOUR—A left to the jaw and a right hook, and Genaro was fighting a winning contest. Jarvis tried to stand his ground, and though he ducked and slipped cleverly he could not keep clear of the American's right, which made a mark time and again on Jarvis's face. Genaro took one straight left, but apart from this the Englishman's courage was the only admirable feature of his display.

ROUND FIVE—Jarvis was cautious, but determined, and he narrowly missed with a left to the head. Soon afterwards he sent in a stinging right to the body, and as Genaro missed with an uppercut Jarvis again punched the American's ribs. Genaro, however, came back for more, and Jarvis took a lot of punishment from the stinging right of the American.

ROUND SEVEN—Jarvis tried hard, but could not get through his opponent's defence. He mixed it, and took punishment at close quarters. Three times Genaro sent in uppercuts as Jarvis came in, and though Jarvis fought pluckily he could not land a real blow during the round.

PACE SLOWS DOWN.

ROUND EIGHT—Jarvis must have known that he was a loser. He went in desperately, but took three rights to the jaw, just not sufficiently well timed enough to settle him. Jarvis connected with a right soon afterwards, and at this stage both were slower, and there was a good deal of sparring in a comparatively tame round.

ROUND NINE—A clinch, a right to the head on the break away, and then a left. Matt Wells, the referee, pulled the pair aside from the clinch, and then Jarvis got in with two fine rights under Genaro's heart, but they seemed to have no effect upon the American. Jarvis rained punches with both hands to the American's ribs, but failed to stop him. The Englishman did much better in this round.

ROUND TEN—As quick as ever, Genaro was content to mix it, and the first real blow was a right, which opened the cut on Jarvis's eye. It shook the Englishman, and though he conceded nothing in courage it seemed that he had no guard against the right of the American, which found its mark time and again. Genaro seldom used his left except to feint, and he kept swinging that lightning-like right to the head, and rarely missed.

ROUND ELEVEN—A left lead and a right cross and Jarvis at once was on the defensive. He sent in punches to the body, which badly missed. The American was too quick for him, but Jarvis now and again was quick enough to step away from danger.

GENARO PUNISHED.

ROUND TWELVE—Early in the round Genaro caught Jarvis in the stomach with a right. It shook Jarvis badly, but, while the American was waiting for an opening, Jarvis went in with both hands and fought his opponent. Jarvis fought desperately, and he punished Genaro with body blows before the round ended.

ROUND THIRTEEN—Jarvis cleverly slipped his man on the ropes. He caught Genaro with a fine left to the solar plexus, and for a while Genaro was on the defensive. Jarvis ran into a left uppercut, but later he puzzled the American as he sent in punches to the body, following him all round the ring with Genaro unable to get off the ropes.

ROUND FOURTEEN—It was a rugged, mixed affair for a while, and then Jarvis swung a powerful right to the body. He fought well at close quarters, and punched the American's ribs until they showed red. Genaro was missing with both hands now, and Jarvis, fighting in desperation, was doing all the forcing, and the American's defence was not now so good.

A SLOGGING FINISH.

ROUND FIFTEEN—Both went at it hammer and tongs, and science seemed to be forgotten until Jarvis swung a right and left to the head as he came out of a clinch. With heads down they fought blow for blow. There was no art in it. It was a fight, and there was little boxing in the last round. Genaro punched Jarvis to the body and to the head without apparently thinking of defence, and it was a wonder that the men were on their feet at the end.

OTHER RESULTS.

Four Rounds—Johnny Peters (Battersea) and Evan Lane (Wales) boxed a draw.

Six Rounds—Jack Griffiths (Hastings) beat Fred Green (Blackfriars) on points.

Twelve Rounds Contest — Johnny Cuthbert (Sheffield) beat Edouard Mascart (France) on points. Cuthbert showed extreme cleverness with his left hand throughout the contest, and the British featherweight champion won by a wide margin of points.

COURSING.

NEWBRIDGE.

LODER CUP FOR MR. HARTE

By Our Special Correspondent.

The holder of the Loder Cup, Mr. Thomas Harte, who won it last season with Hidden Pride, divided the stake at Newbridge yesterday with Mr. J. M. Collins, the conditions being that the cup would be taken by the Kildare courser, and so the trophy became his property. Mr. Harte also won the Faircross Stakes with Hidden Run, while Mr. Collins divided the other puppy stakes with Mr. J. Moylan, the jockey.

There was a small company for the closing stage, but they enjoyed much better coursing than we had on the opening day, the hares standing up in fine style in the majority of the trials. Still, there was a lack of uniformity about the sport all through, and the meeting did not maintain its reputation. However, it is too early in the season to expect the ideal; when the weather changes we may look forward to much better coursing at venues like Newbridge.

The salient feature was the defeat of The Lamb, last season's Cork Cup winner, by Spring Forward, but the Southern dog had not convinced many on the first day. Nevertheless, his chances were rated so highly that odds of 5 to 1 were laid against his opponent. The course has to be added to the number which in recent years have been so much discussed. In the run-up those who were at the far end of the ground seemed to be handicapped by an optical illusion; for they saw The Lamb in front when the hare was turned, and the next instant Spring Forward had brought her down as she was shifted to him. But from where the turn was made, about thirty yards nearer the slipper, the spectators, or some of them, saw Spring Forward squeeze up by half a length, move the hare to The Lamb, and take pussy in his stride as the Cork dog sent her back to him. Anyway, it was the closest course of the meeting, and an exciting one. In the other semi-final Hidden Pride gave another convincing display against Wrong Change, which was then purchased by Mr. Collins at a good figure, but the finalists were not, as stated, sent to slips again, and while Hidden Pride will likely represent Mr. Harte in the Belsize Cup, the other will be kept in reserve for the Irish Cup.

Mr. Ahern suffered a keen disappointment in the defeat of Admiral, one of the fastest dogs at the meeting, but he had not much luck. In the first place, Admiral seemed to many to have won the course with Beal Boy the first time, after being led, but the hat came off. On being slipped again they got on to separate hares in the run-up, and the third time Beal Boy proved three lengths the speedier to the hare, and allowed the red but one point in a short trial. The winner ran his courses right well, however, but we were deprived of the pleasure of seeing what must have been an intensely interesting course with Guileless Joe; for the owner of the latter had agreed, in the event of the two dogs winning, to divide with Mr. Collins.

SPRING FLOWERS.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Garden Correspondent says:—Now, or shortly to hand, will come those charming little Azaleas, bristling with plump buds, the potential of spring beauty, of which we put the pure white Deutsche Perle in the premier position. That, of course, is a matter of taste, as there are lovely things among them, ideal for the greenhouse and grand when at their best for house decoration on special occasions. There is a pleasure, too, in growing them on to renew their beauty year after year. So, too, with little Camellias in small pots well set with buds, and these in variety, including the Japanese Sasanqua, which, as a wildling in Japan, glorifies miles of countryside, described by travellers as of marvellous beauty, all of which can be found in the florists' when in flower, but, to the plant lover there is a charm in the home growing.

POULTRY, CAGE BIRDS, DAIRY.

GREEN FOOD IN WINTER.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—When fresh cabbages can be had they are the best green food that hens can get, but do not, as some people advise, hang them high up for the hens to jump at. Hens were not made to practise gymnastics, and this jumping may rupture heavy hens. Place all green vegetables in net bags or enclosed behind a piece of wire netting, through which they can pick them. Whole cabbage may be tied by the stalk to a stake, but within reach of the birds. Swede turnips can be cut in half and placed in boxes in convenient places. The hens will pick them to the rind, and they are good for them. Any scraps of vegetables that are waste or what is over in the house may be boiled and mixed with pollard or ground oats, but do not include potato skins. Potatoes are not the best food for laying hens, though they may have them occasionally, but they should be peeled and mashed with some sort of meal.
